BRITAIN, FRANCE TO AID BILBAO EVACUATION

FINLEY SEES ACTION IN 2 WEEKS

Other Members Ready
As Soon as Funds Available

A $3,500,000 flood control bond election will be called by the board of supervisors in the very near future, authorities said today.

So far have plans for Orange county's $15,000,000 flood control program forged ahead that members of the board of supervisors are only awaiting congressional appropriation of funds before calling the election.

Supervisor Steele Finley of Santa Ana told The Journal today that the board of supervisors plans to call a $3,500,000 bond election very soon.

Report Confirmed

"I wouldn't be surprised if the bond election is called before two weeks is over," Supervisor Finley said. "The plan is to call a $3,500,000 bond election. The board of supervisors doesn't figure on spending all that money for its share of the cost, but my understanding is that the government wants the election called for that amount."

Supervisor Finley and other members of the board today confirmed the exclusive story in yesterday's Journal, which announced that the U. S. army engineers are only awaiting appropriation of money from congress before acting on the big flood control program.

Major Theo. Wyman jr., U. S. army engineer in charge of the Southern California division, told The Journal that the army engineers are only awaiting appropriation before advertising for work on the project, which was approved by congress last year. He made it clear that all necessary approval by boards and committees has been obtained.

Riley, Mitchell Agree
Supervisor John Mitchell confirmed the fact that the supervisors plan to call the bond election in the near future. "Everything," he said, "is working out as we had hoped. We are only waiting for the appropriation. Then we will call the bond election."

Supervisor Harry D. Riley said he "knew we'd be hearing something soon, and as soon as we do we will not let any grass grow under our feet," confirming the fact that the time for the bond election is drawing close.

A similar sentiment was expressed by Supervisor N. E. West of Laguna Beach, who said the supervisors are all in accord on the flood control program.

County's Cost

It appeared that the matter of whether Orange county would have to bear the cost of moving the railroad and highway in the Prado reservoir section still is an issue. Supervisor Finley said his understanding is that the county will have to pay the cost of this work, estimated at about $600,000. However, he said, he did not expect the actual cost of Orange county's share in the program will amount to more than $2,000,000.

Orange county's share of the cost in the big flood control program is for purchase of rights of way in the Prado reservoir, and possibly for moving the highway and railroad in that section.

3 CONVICTS DIE TRYING ESCAPE

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (AP)—The warden's office reported three inmates were killed and a fourth critically injured in an attempted prison break today at West Virginia state penitentiary.

An attack of the office of Warden C. F. McClintic shot the prisoners as they attempted to escape in a prison truck. He opened fire with a machine gun after sounding a general alarm. Other guards came running.

Information was not available as to whether others in the prison colony of 1800 men were involved in the attempted break.

Sherlock Holmes Dead; Long Live Sherlock Holmes

NEW YORK. (AP)—Sherlock Holmes, the great detective, is dead.

He was an old man, retired to rural Connecticut peace; and he was an American, not an Englishman from Baker street. He who died today was William Gillette. But just as surely he was Sherlock Holmes.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the famous detective. The British and American public took him to their hearts as an outstanding character of fiction.

But it was William Gillette, the American actor, who put him on the stage, writing a drama that was to become one of the most substantial long time starring vehicles of its time.

His characterization became the personification of Holmes. So that even those who read of the great detective instinctively pictured him in the person of Gillette.

NOTED ACTOR SUCCUMBS

Death Takes Gillette Who Gained Fame as 'Sherlock Holmes'

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—William Gillette, veteran actor, died today of a pulmonary hemorrhage at the Hartford hospital.

Gillette, who was 81, came to the hospital from his Haddam home several weeks ago.

The venerable actor gained his first fame on the stage as the star of "Sherlock Holmes."

His illness started last fall with a cold while he was at his showplace home in Haddam, where Gillette had spent many years in virtual seclusion.

Gillette's fame was enhanced through his acting in another of his productions, "Secret Service."

In the winter of 1935-36, the veteran actor appeared in New York and other eastern cities in a revival of "Three Wise Fools," and was acclaimed by theater audiences.

$12,120,000 More
Put on Taxpayers

SACRAMENTO. (AP)—Bills carrying a total of $12,120,000 for this biennium and $4,500,000 for the next, were reported approved for passage by the ways and means committee to the assembly today.

The same committee approved for passage bills carrying appropriations of about $8,000,000 last Monday.

These items are over and above the budget of $438,000,000 already approved by the same committee and passed by the assembly, and which will be taken up before the senate finance committee tomorrow.

Wants to Inspect Suits at Laguna Under New Ruling

"Big business" entered the picture in the Laguna Beach bathing suit battle last night.

William A. Laird applied for the job of bathing suit inspector under a proposed ordinance regulating beach attire. But Laird's application was not acted upon, one reason being that the council deferred action May 19 its action on the proposition.

There were so many protests the officials decided to sound out public opinion more carefully.

Laird, in applying for the job of bathing suit inspector, sent a letter to the council quoting the following prices:

COURT HALTS ANTI-TRUST ACTION

Aluminum Co. Granted Order Restraining
U. S. Prosecution

PITTSBURGH. (AP)—Federal Judge Robert M. Gibson granted a temporary restraining order today halting the government from prosecuting an anti-trust suit against the Aluminum Company of America in the southern district of New York.

Judge Gibson granted a rule against Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and his assistants to show cause why the restraining order should not be continued and a preliminary injunction granted. The rule was returnable May 7.

The action enjoins the government from prosecuting the anti-trust suit outside of the Pittsburgh district court.

It was granted on petition of Aluminum company attorneys to preserve the jurisdiction in Pittsburgh where a previous suit was filed in 1912. The attorneys contended the earlier action "parallels in detail the suit filed a few days ago."

The petition set forth that the original suit of 1912 "was followed by a consent decree entered June 7, 1912, the terms of which the company has been observing for the past 25 years, and which is still in force and effect."

CEMENT PLANT
UNIONS SPLIT

RIVERSIDE. (AP)—Affiliation with the American Federation of Labor was authorized today by 325 workmen at the Riverside cement company's Crestmore plant, shut down since Monday by a C. I. O.-sponsored strike.

The 325 are members of the Employees' association, which has refused to recognize the C. I. O. walkout.

C. I. O. unionists on the Colorado river aqueduct announced they would refuse to handle cement supplied by the Riverside company if the plant C. I. O. local is not recognized by tomorrow.

DISABLED SHIP
AFIRE IN GALE

SEATTLE. (AP)—Coast guard picked up distress calls from the steamship Cordova, reported afire and her steering gear broken in a stormy gale whipping Necate Strait, B. C.

The coast guard patrol boat Alert was dispatched from Ketchikan, Alaska, to her aid. Messages said the fire was in the Alaska Steamship company liner's No. 2 hold.

The Cordova sailed from here Monday, for Kodiak Island, carrying 104 passengers, including 60 men to staff the Port Hobron whaling station.

At his home, it was said the editor had been ill for several weeks. He died at the New York hospital.

In the second Wilson administration, Hapgood was United States minister to Denmark.

Once Drama Critic
From a dramatic critic's job on the old New York Commercial advertiser—a few years after his graduation from Harvard in 1893—Hapgood became one of the best known magazine editors in the nation.

In 1903, he became editor of Collier's Weekly, a position which he held until he went with Harper's Weekly in 1913 as editor. He was with Hearst's International magazine from 1923 until 1925.

Long a student of politics and government, he was a supporter of Woodrow Wilson, who made him minister to Denmark in February, 1919.

Noted Biographer
When Smith became governor of New York, Hapgood joined his close circle of advisors and was a frequent conferee on social, economic and political matters. Hapgood chronicled the life of Smith in the book, "Up From City Streets."

As a biographer, he wrote books on the lives of Washington, Lincoln and Webster.

Wally Simpson Will Be Free Monday to Wed Edward, Britain's Ex-Monarch

LONDON. (AP)—Wallis Warfield Simpson's divorce decree nisi from Ernest Aldrich Simpson will be made absolute Monday, a day earlier than had been expected.

Then she will be free to wed Edward of Windsor, perhaps as a June bride.

It was learned today the application for the final decree will be heard Monday before Mr. Justice Bucknill.

Old London Preen's For Coronation

By ELMER W. PETERSON

LONDON. (AP)—Old London was in the full flush of pre-coronation preening today. With only 13 days left before the day of grandeur—May 12—when Big Ben will boom forth at noon and a king will be crowned, it is a changed London. What was the Mall has become a long line of masts topped by heraldic lions. A "gateway of triumph" is rising at the foot of Whitehall. A "Maypole" is being built at Charing Cross. Stands along Hyde Park flaunt red, white and blue bunting.

London, with gathering speed, is going gay.

Parliament Square looks as though a circus were coming to town. Canvas-covered grandstands block every view.

It is costing a great deal of money to make stolid, starchy London a city of festivity. To "dress" four miles of streets in Westminster, for example, will take $15,000.

The electric lights represent an estimated 10,000,000,000 candlepower.

White and gold play a prominent part in the decorations that flutter in the April wind. Blue and white banners, too are being hung.

Charles Gets Guard
The statue of Charles I, at Charing Cross, is being surrounded by banners and masts. There will be a living guard for the statue on coronation day.

Two 60-foot masts in Whitehall, carrying a large streamer and banners, will mark the entry to Parliament Square.

Long blue banners surmounted by golden crowns and white and red flags drape the entrance into Regent street from Piccadilly Circus.

OLSON BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY

Kuchel Amendment Gives Royalty to City But

Gov. Frank Merriam figuratively has about 500,000,000 barrels of oil and the Standard Oil company in his lap today.

Passage yesterday of the Olson and O'Donnell bills in the lower house providing for drilling into the huge oil pool offshore at Huntington Beach now leaves the matter directly in the hands of the governor. Last year he failed to approve two drilling bills, after being bombarded by proponents and opponents of the measure.

State Royalty

The Olson legislation provides for drilling of two miles of ocean frontage divided into 11 parcels, with the state to operate its own wells providing satisfactory bids are not received. Island drilling would be allowed. His bill provides also that the state receive 30 per cent of gas and oil royalties. The senate recently passed this legislation.

Assemblyman Thomas Kuchel of Anaheim introduced an amendment providing a royalty for Huntington Beach of $2 out of each $1000 of state income. Atty. Gen. U. S. Webb has contended that it will not be possible legally for the state to give away any of its royalty.

Competitive Bids

The second drilling bill to receive approval, presented by Assemblyman O'Donnell, provides for competitive bidding, but not for state participation if bids are unsatisfactory, and lowers the royalty for the state to 20 per cent. Drilling from groins or piers would be allowed in this legislation.

O'Donnell also specified that the land be divided into 11 parcels, with not less than five wells to be drilled on each.

'MRS. SCHIDER'

CHICAGO. (AP)—Traveling under the name of "Mrs. Schider," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Chicago by plane at 10:20 a. m. today on her way to Seattle to visit her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger.

She told reporters she used the assumed name in an effort—which quickly proved unsuccessful—to "surprise" her daughter. Leaving Washington last midnight, the President's wife arrived here about 4 a. m., and rested in a loop hotel before resuming her trip.

N.Y. Moralists Open Drive Against 'Strip Tease' Acts

NEW YORK. (AP)—The downfall of many young girls and the breaking of many a young man's morals was laid today at the marquee of New York's burlesque theaters.

A concentrated attack was directed at burlesque performances in general and at their advertising posters in particular at the second day's hearing before License Commissioner Paul Moss.

The drive against burlesque theaters came at a time when they and their celebrated "strip tease" acts were enjoying a near all-time peak in popularity. The licenses of New York's 17 burlesque theaters expire at midnight Friday, and their critics want the houses closed.

Moss read a letter from Patrick Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York, in which the cardinal said "the spread of the civil influence and destructive results from these disgraceful and pernicious performances is the cause of much concern to me as the

'Money-Making Machine' Gobbles Sucker's $2550

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—B. H. Thorne, 41, was on trial today, charged with collecting $2500 from C. W. Hopper of Culver City on promise of producing a "money making machine" that would transform $1 bills into $10 bills.

Hopper told authorities he gave Thorne the money in a hotel and that soon afterward Thorne left to obtain an important chemical he said was necessary to effect the transformation. Hopper said Thorne didn't return.

H. B. VOTING ON CHARTER

Would Allow City to Be Independent of Legislature

Huntington Beach voters today were faced with deciding whether their civic government should be changed from the present sixth class form of rule to a "home rule" charter setup.

Four polls opened at 6 o'clock this morning and will remain open until 7 p. m., with late reports today indicating a light vote.

The new plan is essentially the same as the present form of government, but is different in that a sixth class city is granted authority through legislative action, while when operating under a charter a community is its own authority as long as it does not violate state laws.

The proposed charter provides for five councilmen to be elected for four-year terms. An alternative measure on the ballot provides for election of councilmen from wards, or districts.

Under the new plan, the city clerk and treasurer would be elected, while other officers would be appointed by the council.

Reports on the election will be broadcast at 9 o'clock this evening from KVOE.

Joan Bennett to

HOLLYWOOD. (AP)—Another of Hollywood's "perfect marriages," Joan Bennett and Gene Markey of the screen, is soon to be dissolved.

The actress startled many of her friends with the announcement she would file suit for divorce as soon as she finishes work in her current picture. She said she would charge incompatibility with her film producer-husband, whom she married in 1932.

Five-Year Beach
Program Approved

Semi-official approval by city council members was given the ambitious Huntington Beach five-year beach improvement plan at a meeting of council members and the board of directors of the chamber of commerce there last night.

Plotting a program which will, in five years, develop the community into one of the most beautiful beach resorts on the coast, chamber officials explained their plan for acquisition of more than 200 acres of land from the Standard Oil company and various land and water companies. Council members, although not meeting officially, gave their approval to the plan.

BASQUES ASK REFUGE FOR 300,000

Plan to Give Haven to Women and Children
Waits Rebel Okeh

LONDON. (AP)—Home Secretary Sir John Simon announced today that Great Britain will offer a refuge to "a limited number" of the children now besieged in Spain's Bilbao.

At the same time, both British and French authorities indicated naval aid in the evacuation of up to 300,000 refugees from the besieged Basque capital awaited a promise from Insurgent General Francisco Franco that he will not molest such an undertaking.

Basques Make Plea

Basque President Juan Antonio Aguirre appealed today to world powers for a sanctuary for the refugees, in the face of insurgent assault on Bilbao and devastating air raids nearby.

Sir John wrote to Wilfred Roberts, one of several parliamentarians who is seeking to work in the evacuation. He said an unspecified number of children from Bilbao might be brought into England under the auspices of the National Joint Committee for Spanish Relief. He stipulated they must not become a charge on public funds, that eventually they must be repatriated and that health precautions must be taken.

Bombings Decried

Simultaneously Viscount Cecil, in the house of lords, bitterly assailed insurgent bombings of Basque civilians and declared "there is nothing of this kind in the history of civilized nations."

German pilots were responsible, he cried, Berlin should recall them. (Germany has denied this.)

British spokesmen said "the government is always ready to assist any humanitarian endeavor" but added it first was necessary for the Bilbao Basques and their (See EVACUATION, Page 2)

DRIVER MISSES FIRE DEATH

One-thousand gallons of gasoline went up in flames, and a truck driver narrowly escaped death in a dangerous fire near Fullerton yesterday, when a tank truck owned by the Sunset Oil company burst into flames, it was reported today by State Forester Joe Scherman.

The truck was ignited when E. W. Hobbs, Fullerton, the driver, ran out of gasoline and attempted to fill the small tank on the truck from a can. The container touched a battery terminal, and the can exploded, igniting the truck, Scherman said.

Hobbs was not seriously burned, and phoned the Fullerton fire department and the state forestry headquarters at Orange for aid, but before the blaze could be extinguished about 20 orange trees and nine palm trees on the J. M. Callan ranch on West Orange-thorne avenue had been burned. Damage was estimated at about $1000.

BURIAL PLOT FOR COUNTY ADVISED

Would Save Money and Enable Better Care, Explains Utt

Orange county may buy its own burial plot for indigents, both to save on the expense of graves and to give better care and upkeep, it was learned today.

Although the matter has not been discussed by the board of supervisors, the movement is an outgrowth of recent disclosures by The Journal that "Potter's Field" has been allowed to grow up in weeds and piles of tin cans.

James B. Utt, jr., member of the Orange county cemetery district board of directors, reported today that the cemetery board has recommended that the county buy an acre of ground near the Fairhaven cemetery.

County Auditor W. T. Lambert has held that the county cannot spend money to clean up cemetery property not owned by the county, and has held up a county warrant paying for clean-up work done recently by the cemetery board.

Utt said the county can pay for cleaning up the occupied graves, which the county buys from the Fairhaven cemetery at $12.50 each, but cannot legally clean up the spaces between or the unoccupied portions of the plot, under Lambert's interpretation.

Now Costs $12,500
According to Utt, burial land could be obtained for about $2500 per acre. At present an acre of land, represented by 1000 graves, costs about $12,500.

Because the county cemetery district comprises only the first, fourth and fifth supervisorial districts, it cannot use its funds to maintain county indigent burial plots which are the property of the entire county, Utt said.

Purchase of a burial ground would allow supervisors to maintain in proper shape the entire plot and to provide whatever care and planting was considered advisable.

BALL SELLS BIG RAIL HOLDINGS

CLEVELAND. (AP)—George A. Ball announced sale of the railroad securities of Midamerica Corp. to Robert R. Young, of New York, Allen R. Kirby, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Frank F. Kolbe of New York.

The securities are those of the Allegheny Corp., a Midamerica holding company.

Also announced was the sale of the extensive Cleveland real estate holdings built up by the late O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen.

The sale was made by the George and Frances Ball Foundation—charitable, religious and educational institution to which Ball a month ago transferred his controlling interest in the $3,000,000, 000 Van Sweringen empire.

Expect Increase in Union Barber Shops

After a conference last night with owners of barber shops maintaining standard price scales, representatives of the Journeymen Barbers' union today said they expected to increase the number of union shops in Santa Ana and Orange county.

They have called a meeting of all barbers and shop owners for 8 p. m. today in the Labor temple here to discuss a unionization campaign.

A major objective will be maintenance of the standard price of 50 cents for haircuts.

Permit for Hog Ranch Revoked

Permits of the L. & N. Feeding company to operate a hog feeding ranch at Wright street and Wintersburg avenue were revoked today by the county building inspector.

The action was taken after protests were filed Tuesday with the board of supervisors by residents of the surrounding territory who charged it would be a community eyesore and a health menace.

MORE ABOUT EVACUATION

insurgent foes to agree on evacuation.

The spokesmen said declarations by some parliamentarians that the foreign office had given approval to immediate evacuation with the protection of British warships apparently were based on a misunderstanding, but they left the way open for ultimate government assistance.

A member of the National Joint Committee for Spanish Relief was flying to Bilbao to arrange first for removal of 100,000 children to temporary homes in Great Britain, France, Scandinavia and other countries.

The conquest of Durango, only 16 miles from tottering Bilbao, and the bombing and razing of Guernica, the "Holy City" of the war-torn Basque country, spurred the members of parliament to perfect the evacuation plan.

Referring to "the ghastly possibilities" if the air raid which brought death to 800 Spaniards in flaming Guernica should be repeated at Bilbao, Roberts said: "We hope to start evacuation of women and children from Bilbao to Saint Jean de Luz (France) as soon as the necessary organization there is ready—probably within two or three days."

BASQUES PLEAD FOR AID IN EVACUATION

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier. (AP)—Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgent troops occupied devastated Guernica, "sacred city of the Basques," at 11:15 a. m. today, while the government of the Basque republic strove feverishly to evacuate 300,000 noncombatants from Bilbao and pleaded with world powers to find a haven for them.

Insurgent headquarters at Victoria announced the Guernica occupation in a terse communique.

Guernica, once the Basque capital and the shrine of their proud and independent race, lies 20 miles northeast of Bilbao, behind the main line of insurgent advance on Bilbao, the present Basque capital and insurgent stronghold. The Basques are fighting for the main Spanish government.

In Bilbao itself, President Juan Antonio Aguirre called upon the powers to provide a sanctuary for his hordes of refugees, but pledged the fighting men of the Basque republic to stand firm in defense of their capital, asking "nothing" from the world.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The house this week killed a proposed constitutional amendment to provide for a unicameral legislature. The vote was 88 to 53.

BOYS BURNED FATALLY IN L. A. HOME

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Two small boys burned to death in the bedroom of their home during the absence of their parents at a neighborhood film theater early today.

Her clothing afire, 11-year-old Evelyn Lowe, sister of the victims, ran, screaming, to neighbors for help. Two engine companies were unable to save the boys, Henry F. Lowe, jr., 9, and Eldred, 7, from the crackling blaze.

Young Evelyn suffered first, second and third degree burns, which she may not survive, hospital attendants said.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Lowe, each 29, returned from the theater to find their cottage in ashes and firemen extricating the charred bodies of their sons. Cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Detective Lieut. George Hill said the Lowes had arranged with a 16-year-old girl, Lola Murphy, to watch their children. She went home at 9 p. m., while the children were listening to a radio program, warned by a fire in the kitchen stove, Hill said.

Emison Elected to Head Country Club

R. A. Emison today began a year's term as president of the Santa Ana Country club, following election of officers by the club directors yesterday. He succeeds Col. M. B. Wellington.

Ben Osterman was named vice president; George Parker will begin his third term as secretary, and Riley Huber was named treasurer.

Make Long Trip To Stage Battle

Two Mexican laborers from Arlington who traveled clear to Olive to have a fight were treated at the county hospital early today for miscellaneous injuries.

Mike Orasco, 26, who told physicians he had been kicked in the mouth, was sewed up, and Cress Cruz, 23, was treated for cuts from a broken bottle which struck his hand.

Americans Hurt In Plane Crash

CARACAS, Venezuela. (AP)—The ministry of communications announced today that William Armstrong, United States writer, had been seriously injured in the crash of an aero-postal plane in the Cuyuni river country. Frederic D. Grab, United States legation commercial attache here was said to have been injured slightly.

Earlier reports said one passenger was killed and that a missionary and a woman passenger, as well as the pilot, also were hurt. The plane had been missing five days when the co-pilot, the wireless operator and a passenger made their way to El Dorado yesterday on a raft to report the accident.

China's improved roads are five times as long as in 1930.

Garbo Faces Fund Trial on Monday

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Greta Garbo was warned today that she will be expected to appear Monday for trial of a $10,500 recovery suit brought against the Swedish actress by David Shtratter, former Berlin motion picture producer.

Shtratter's attorney, James J. McCarthy, said he wanted to question Miss Garbo on the witness stand concerning the three loans, amounting to $10,500, which his client alleges he made to her in 1924 in Europe.

U. S. Steel Votes Back Dividends

NEW YORK. (AP)—Directors of U. S. Steel Corporation this week announced a disbursement of $5.75 on the preferred stock.

This disbursement includes $4 a share of arrears on the senior stock and $1.75 in the regular dividend. With this declaration there remain unpaid on arrears in preferred stock dividends $5.25 a share, totaling $18,914,758.

DRUG ADDICTS FLEE FIRE

PEIPING, China. (AP)—Fire which raged through the ancient "Temple of Ten Thousand Longevitys" today sent 728 narcotic addicts fleeing into the city's streets. One hundred of them gained at least temporary freedom from the treatment that had been forced upon them.

Police captured more than 600, including twenty whom they wounded with gun-fire as the addicts raced out of the burning structure. Many were semi-crazed women, long victims of the narcotic habit.

Authorities combed Peiping for those who were still free and predicted all would be found within a few hours.

LUBLIN, Poland. (AP)—Police seized more than 100 persons Wednesday in an effort to run down a secret Communist organization rapidly spreading among Polish farmers.

Check Identity Of Drowned Man

Possible identification of a drowned man found Tuesday near Sunset Beach was the basis of a sheriff's investigation today.

R. W. Quackenbush of Dana Villa reported that a man named Harry Bosworth had been missing for three or four weeks from Arlight in Santa Barbara county. Initials on the hat and of the drowned man were "H. B."

SEE NO HOPE OF SAVING YOUTH

BERLIN. (AP)—United States embassy officials today said the sole hope of saving 21-year-old Heinrich Hirsch from the headman's block for a bomb plot against the life of Adolf Hitler or some other high official lay in the chance that Hitler himself would intercede because of Hirsch's youth.

Embassy spokesmen pointed out the Americans could do nothing more than place the humanitarian aspects of the case before German officials.

WARDEN FOR TEHACHAPI SELECTED

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Mrs. Ernest B. Wallace, chairman of the board of trustees of the Tehachapi prison for women, has announced appointment of Miss Florence Monahan as superintendent of the institution.

"Miss Monahan, who has just resigned as superintendent of the Illinois Training School for Girls, left Illinois Wednesday morning for California," said Mrs. Wallace. "She was receiving more salary in Illinois than California could pay her, but accepted the position because she believes that Tehachapi can be made an outstanding institution."

Miss Monahan is vice president of the American Prison association.

BOURBONS TO GATHER ON FRIDAY

Assembly Organization To Be Completed at Meeting Here

Still organizing their battle lines, officers and directors of the Orange county unit of the California Assembly of Democrats will meet in the junior college building at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. Completion of organization will be one of the matters to be taken care of at the business session. Committee chairmen and members are to be selected, it was announced by Chester I. Dale, chairman of the county assembly. Committees to be named include publicity, speakers' bureau and entertainment.

Dale announced that the assembly is seriously considering establishment of permanent headquarters in the immediate future. He said that several locations on Main street, Santa Ana, now are under consideration. This matter is expected to be dealt with tomorrow night.

George White, director of the San Diego and Orange county Works Progress Administration district, will be the featured speaker at the meeting. He will discuss the San Diego assembly, which has about 14,000 members.

There are 100 directors of the Orange county assembly, and 12 vice chairmen in various parts of the county. The assembly was organized to cooperate in a statewide campaign to get behind one Democratic candidate for the governorship at the next election.

Townsend News, Views

By WALTER R. ROBB

(Opinions and comment expressed in this column are not necessarily those of The Journal—Editor's note.)

Santa Ana club No. 3 meets tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the 509 West Fourth street Townsend hall with Vice President Sherman in the chair. W. R. Cogswell, member of the 19th district board from San Bernardino county has been secured as the evening speaker. He has appeared several times before as a Townsend speaker in Orange county and always has a good message. Visitors are always shown a cordial welcome when they attend this club's meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. McKamy have sold their grocery business at 1330 French street, Santa Ana, to V. Hammond of Anaheim who has already taken possession. The McKamy family are members of Santa Ana club No. 8 which meets every Thursday evening in the Lincoln school. The Santa Ana Townsends will hope that the McKamys still continue their residence in Santa Ana. They have made many friends while operating the grocery business on French street.

Mrs. Jessie M. Robb, wife of the writer of this column, left last Saturday for a visit with a son, W. Francis Robb and his family at Safford, Ariz. Young Robb was formerly in the employ of the Sears Roebuck company of this city and later was transferred to Riverside, and from there to the management of the Safford Sears Roebuck store.

The writer met John H. Lewis, 613 West Third street, yesterday and from him learned that his wife, Mrs. Carrie Lewis, is still confined at the Orange county hospital, with the likelihood that she will be there for a long time. She was injured seriously in a fall some time back which will probably leave her permanently crippled, according to her husband. The visiting hours at the hospital are from 1 to 3 and from 7 to 8 p. m. each day. At those hours Mrs. Lewis is privileged to receive visitors. She and her husband have both been earnest workers for a long period in the Townsend cause. The Townsend ladies should call on her in these days of her trouble and suffering.

The NYA orchestra, under the direction of T. Dustan Collins will furnish music for the Costa Mesa Townsend club's sponsored mass meeting in the Woman's clubhouse which begins with a pot-luck dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight. A great time is expected as splendid preparations for a fine program have been made.

President Joe Ritter of the Buena Park club will be in the height of his glory tonight when he gets his feet under the table that's loaded down with turkey and the things that go with it. But the writer's got a hunch that if Sam Craig can locate one of those lemon pies the Buena Park Townsends ladies know so well how to make, then even the turkey—so far as he's concerned—will be neglected. The Buena Park clubhouse will be a scene of happy Townsend fellowship at 6:30 p. m. and every Townsends in going distance ought to be there, and probably will be.

H. F. Hayward, publicity chairman wants everybody to know that Santa Ana club No. 7 will meet in the Orange Avenue Christian church at McFadden and Orange avenues at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow for a rousing meeting. Make preparations to attend this club meeting. A special program has been arranged—don't miss it.

Santa Ana club No. 11 meets at 7:30 o'clock in the Franklin school at 1512 East Fourth street. Grant Henderson will preside. The word comes to the writer that an entertainment is scheduled which will put merriment into the hearts of those present. If you miss out on the fun it will be your own fault.

Football fanatics will not be forced to wait until next September to get another glimpse of the Southern California champion Dons.

Bronzed Bill Cook, in the midst of the most ambitious spring practice ever undertaken here, has issued his Santa Ana Junior collegians no less than 30 plays for night games at the Municipal bowl with Pasadena J. C. May 7 and Cal-Tech varsity May 13.

These 30 plays, off two formations, will be executed by a squad of 52 players who, Cook guarantees, will show the home folk some football. He is highly pleased with the results of spring practice, and beginning Monday will call out his Dons five days—instead of two.

Here's good news for wrestling addicts: Herr Hans Steinke has signed with New-Matchmaker Tige Clinton for three more bouts at the Orange County Athletic club.

"Steinke gets first call in my book hereafter," declares Clinton, "and if it's possible to make the Cantonwine-Steinke match, I'll use it as the feature Monday night and set the grudge bout between 'Bull' Martin and Tommy Marvin over until May 10."

Cantonwine has taken a run-out powder three times here during the past 12 months, but Clinton has been assured by the state athletic commission that the Hangman will be forced to fill his engagement here. If the bout with Steinke materializes, Clinton will send Leo (The Lion Man) Numa against Marvin in the three-fall secondary, with Jose Murguina facing Roy Reigles, and Young Stetcher opening against Johnny Del Rio in a rematch.

Odds and ends: Paul Waner of Pittsburgh, whose .373 led the National league in hitting last season, boasts a batting average of .348 over an 11-year stretch. . . . Forrest (Spec) Towns, the Olympic and national high hurdles champion and world record holder, mastered his art by placing pebbles on the hurdles and attempting to skim 'em off. . . . Terry Moore, Cardinal center fielder, studies oil painting. . . . Joe Marty, Pacific Coast league sensation now with the Chicago Cubs, was a freshman football star at St. Mary's before turning to the diamond.

Braddock Training Camp Selected at Grand Beach, Mich.

CHICAGO. (AP)—The training camp question had been solved at last for Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock today, and was virtually decided for Joe Louis.

Braddock, still waiting to hear for certain whether he will defend his title against Louis in Chicago June 22, or against Max Schmeling in New York June 3, will start serious training early next week at Grand Beach, Mich., 65 miles from Chicago, in a $3,000,000 vacation layout. Louis probably will do his work at Lake Geneva, Wis., 75 miles northwest of Chicago.

Seek 12,000 Trout for Four Streams Here

TRABUCO HAS BEST WATER IN YEARS

County Sportsmen Sign Petition to Be Sent State Commission

Twelve thousand aged (adult) trout will be planted in Orange county streams within the next month if a petition, now being circulated among local sportsmen, is granted by the state fish and game commission.

The county's four streams—Trabuco, Santiago, Silverado and San Juan Capistrano—have not been stocked recently, and with water conditions the best in several years, sportsmen maintain they are entitled to the fish at this time.

H. C. Jackson, game warden, was informed the petition would be necessary to secure immediate action from the fish and game commission.

The petition reads: "We, the undersigned, wish to call your attention to the water conditions of Orange county streams, and petition that 12,000 aged (adult) trout be planted in our streams. Trabuco is in the best condition, as to the amount of water, that it has been in during the last 40 years. It has not been stocked for several years, but still has a few trout."

Until—and if—Orange county's streams are stocked, local sportsmen will flock to outside fishing points with the opening of the trout season Saturday.

Among the Southland streams heavily stocked are San Jacinto river, Silver creek, Santa Ana river, Mill creek, City creek and San Gabriel river. All are clear, but a little high at this time.

Best fishing in Riverside county will be found at Dark canyon, Strawberry, South fork Jacinto and Snow creek, it is reported. In San Bernardino county, sportsmen will divide their time at Bear creek, Santa Ana river, Mill creek, Deep creek, Mohave creek and City creek.

Arrowhead will offer catfish as well as trout, and at Bear lake will be trout, blue gill and bass.

Best spots for trout in San Diego county are Boulder creek, Deer creek, Pala creek, and the St. Luis Rey river on the Indian reservation. There will be lake fishing for bass, blue gill, crappie and sun perch.

Principal spots in the Sierra district the first few weeks of the season will be at Hot creek, Owens river, Silver, Grant and June lakes.

JENKINS SEES AUTO SPEED OF 500 MILES AN HOUR— BUT IT WON'T THRILL HIM

SALT LAKE CITY. (AP)—Thrills have no place in the life of the world's No. 1 motor car endurance driver—bronzed Ab Jenkins.

The Utah racer, who last summer set new world records for 24 and 48-hour endurance tests, now has visions of sending a radically different speedster hurtling over the packed Bonneville salt flats 130 miles west of here next summer at speeds up to 400 miles an hour.

If he does he will be aiming at Sir Malcolm Campbell's mark of 301.129 m.p.h. established on the same salt flats in 1935.

But Jenkins won't be doing it for the thrill. It's business with him.

"There isn't any thrill in it," Jenkins says. "Even though I lost the wheel there wouldn't be any thrill. It's all in the day's work."

Jenkins plans to try early in the summer for a new 24-hour world record. For that attempt to break his own mark of 153.76 miles per hour, he will use a specially built car with a racing (Duesenberg) chassis and an airplane (Curtis-Wright) motor.

It is toward the world record for a measured mile that Jenkins is pointing chiefly. He's developing a racing car to be powered by two motors—one mounted in front, the other in the rear. Plans have not been drawn.

"Campbell set the present record with a 2200-horsepower car," Jenkins explains. "Mine will have 3600 horsepower. I don't see how I can fail."

Jenkins hopes to break Campbell's record decisively; he hopes to reach 350 to 400 miles per hour. He doesn't regard that as the other in the rear. Plans have not been drawn.

"What is the top?" he was asked.

"Probably up to 500 miles an hour," he replied.

The Utah driver predicts he'll "do 400" in a new speedster this summer on the salt flats shown above.

ALTER U. S. C. GRID OFFENSE

Right Half Will Carry Ball

By ROBERT MYERS

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Professor Howard Harding Jones continued to putter around his football laboratory today, experimenting with various formulas for a winning team next fall.

Puttering and experimenting are not new or unpleasant pursuits for Professor Jones, but it is no secret that he plunged into his work this spring with more than ordinary intensity of purpose.

Troy, once the power and glory of west coast football, hasn't had a champion since 1932, the wolves are howling and time's a-wasting.

Two objectives were undertaken this spring by Troy's coach, who hasn't been any happier than his backers these past few seasons. One was to remodel his offense, stressing speed and versatility of attack. The other was to mould the next-fall sophomores into the varsity scheme.

This speedy, versatile offense plan carries the most attention, for apparently that was what Southern California lacked last year. In the past the quarterback carried the ball almost exclusively, with the fullback getting an occasional chance to smack the line.

S. C.'s once feared power plays will not be abandoned, and the boys believe they have another running guard like the great Johnny Baker in Johnny Thomas' 200-pound sophomore.

The backfield material looks good, with a host of seasoned veterans and a sprinkling of promising youngsters. If nothing else, it could qualify as a league of nations, with Amby Schindler of German descent, Angelo Peccianti, an Italian, Jimmy Jones of Canadian parentage and Henry Sasaki, a Japanese.

Reports drifting out of the Trojan quarters indicate that the right halfback will also figure in the ball-toting this year, leaving the left half destined to continue through life solely as a blocker.

And as for a varied attack, Jones has been experimenting with a single wing back formation, faintly similar to the one Pittsburgh used so effectively in the Rose Bowl last January, which means that Trojan fans may expect more funny business in the way of reverses and possibly even a lateral or so.

San Diego Hillers 3 1 750
Santa Ana 3 1 750
Long Beach Poly 3 1 750
San Diego Hoover 3 1 750

Games Tomorrow
Long Beach Wilson at Santa Ana, San Diego Hoover at Alhambra, Long Beach Poly at San Diego (Hilliers).

Six of the nine regulars who will take the field for Coach Joe Kogler in Santa Ana High school's Coast league baseball finale here tomorrow afternoon will be eligible for Citrus Belt league competition next season.

The Saints go up against Long Beach Woodrow Wilson's crack nine at 3 p. m. on Poly field, and can knock the Bruins out of the running with an upset.

Woodrow Wilson will need a victory to gain a two or three-way tie, depending upon the outcome of the Herbert Hoover-Alhambra and Long Beach Poly-San Diego skirmishes, also billed tomorrow.

Tied for fourth place, Kogler's local prep have done better than their record indicates. They shut out Long Beach Poly, defending Southern California champion, 2-0, and lost one-run heart-breakers to Alhambra, 4-3, and San Diego Hoover, 8-7. Only time the Saints were really outclassed was against San Diego's Hilliers, 7-2.

Saint officials learned at a Coast league meeting they could protest the game with Hoover, but will take no action because the local prep are out of the title running.

The Hoover game ended in a dispute when Mitsuo Nitta hit a double and was called out at third base after Ben Byland had crossed the plate in the seventh. The umpire ruled Byland's run did not count.

Regulars playing their last game for the Saints will be Jack McClure, right fielder; Joe Ortega, center fielder, and Mitsuo Nitta, second baseman. McClure will be sent to the mound in the latter innings if Tommy Wilkins, star junior, begins to falter.

Only change in the Saint infield will find Joe Standifer at third base in place of Ernest Barrett. Ben Byland will catch. Gene O'Campo will be on first, and Pete Friedland at short.

The Saints will spend the next two or three weeks in inter-quadrant drill and "civil war" games with Blanchard Beatty's junior collegians.

Opposition from Occidental college will furnish Coach Jess Haxel's Santa Ana team with swimmers plenty of competition tomorrow afternoon at the Eagle Rock pool. The Dons recently won the runner-up position to Fullerton in the Southern California J. C. swimming conference.

Sports Roundup

Injury Victim

NEW YORK. (AP)—"What's your name, boy?" Coach Charlie Bachman of Michigan state, asked a husky tackle the other day. . . . "Alexander Greer, or Ketzko," replied the tackle. . . . "Okay," said Bachman (which is one way nicknames are born). . . . Prosperity note: More open air fight clubs will operate in the metropolitan area this season than ever before. . . . The St. Louis Cardinals are readying an announcement for the press on the Paul Dean situation. . . . Charley Gelbert of the Reds is having a tussle with charley horse.

West coast reports say Promoter Tom Gallery of Los Angeles will charge $100 tons for a benefit show next month featuring Bob Pastor and Bob Nestell. . . . Counts on the Hollywood movie stars who don't mind putting out, to fill the rigside section. . . . Deak Morse, sports editor of the Caledonian Record at St. Johnsbury, VT., craves available U. S. records on candle pin bowling. . . . If you are where they can be had, drop Deak a line. . . .

Lee Grissom, Cincinnati southpaw, had a fight with Al Todd of Pittsburgh three days after Lee became a bridegroom. . . . Getting in shape, eh? . . . Ward Cuff, Marquette's football and track star, is marching to classes in a pair of artistic cowboy boots he acquired in a trade with a southwestern athlete at the Drake relays. . . . Tall and handsome "Alan Bruce," who you'll see playing opposite Anne Shirley in "Miss America" next fall, is none other than Donald Kent, former Marquette football player. . . . Why he changed his name is a mystery to us. . . . Donald Kent sounds just as romantic as Tom Stidham, Oklahoma's new football coach, is going to break in the hard way. . . . His Sooners will play their first four games against Tulsa, Rice, Texas and Nebraska. . . .

But the hot man dropped out for Manager Charles Grimm and his pennant hopes yesterday when Larry French, the only southpaw of class, made a stab at a liner from the bat of Ernie Lombardi and fractured three fingers on his glove hand. Not only did the Cubs drop a 10-3 decision to the roughhouse Reds from Cincinnati, but French took a hospital bed alongside Carleton and Davis, and may be laid up for two months.

This trio won 54 games last year.

Of the hurlers still on tap, Bill Lee has shown little or nothing; Roy Parmelee is anything but a manager's dream; Charley Root has seen better days and the others are unproven youngsters.

All of which adds up to a terrific black eye for the Cubs' pennant chances. Although it's much too early to be eliminating them, the class shown by the mound corps of the Pittsburgh Pirates, whose game with the Cards was rained out yesterday, and the New York Giants, who dropped a 3-2 tilt to Van Mungo's three-hit pitching for Brooklyn, seems to leave little hope for the 1935 champions.

But anything can happen in baseball. The Detroit Tigers had a couple of tough pitching breaks when their top tossers, Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges, were sidelined with ailments. Two others, Flossie Lawson and Elden Auker, came through with some unlooked for skill and Detroit is in second place in the American league.

Earl Averill shines. Lawson made it two in a row yesterday with an 11-5 victory over the St. Louis Browns, aided by some timely belting by Gerry Walker. The win didn't cut the New York Yankees' first place edge, however, since Lefty Gomez treated himself to a five-hitter, and the world champions clouted the Senators, 6-1, in a game that sent Cecil Travis of the Nats to the bench for two weeks with a torn leg ligament.

Earl Averill banged in five runs, including a homer with the bases loaded, as the Cleveland Indians walloped the Chicago White Sox, 7-2, with Mel Harder hitting top form with a five-hit pitching job. In the only other game on the big league front, the Phillies clubbed Danny MacFayden to the showers and topped the Boston Bees, 7-4. The Athletics and Red Sox were rained out in Boston.

set for 1 p. m. today at which time the Japanese No. 2 representative will be named.

Erratic practice on the part of long-legged, red-headed Budge and the cause of considerable concern among the non-playing players, Edward G. Chandler, was believed relieved with the arrival of a shipment of 15½ ounce rackets for the American ace.

Two singles are scheduled for Friday, doubles on Saturday and the final two singles matches, Sunday. Play will start at 1 p. m. (Pacific Standard time).

Those who have watched the prospective rivals in practice pick the United States to triumph in this American zone tie. They believe Budge's dynamite smashes and ruggedness will carry him to two singles victories; that Parker will take one singles and that Budge and Mako will prove invaluable in the doubles competition.

On the upset side, observers point out Yamagishi, Japan's singles and doubles champion, twice before engaged in Davis Cup play and ranked with the greatest in his country's history, may have a shot-making repertoire sufficiently powerful to blast Budge off the courts.

The Japanese captain is favored to win from Milwaukee's Parker. It would then be up to either Nishimura or Nakano, depending on which one gets the call, to win a singles upset.

The draw for singles play was which holds this country's doubles crown.

The Japanese captain is favored to win from Milwaukee's Parker. It would then be up to either Nishimura or Nakano, depending on which one gets the call, to win a singles upset.

The draw for singles play was which holds this country's doubles crown.

Those who have watched the prospective rivals in practice pick the United States to triumph in this American zone tie. They believe Budge's dynamite smashes and ruggedness will carry him to two singles victories; that Parker will take one singles and that Budge and Mako will prove invaluable in the doubles competition.

On the upset side, observers point out Yamagishi, Japan's singles and doubles champion, twice before engaged in Davis Cup play and ranked with the greatest in his country's history, may have a shot-making repertoire sufficiently powerful to blast Budge off the courts.

Here and There With The Journal's
Rambling County Editor
By I. N. (BRICK) GAINES

I'm investigating rumors that Mayor A. C. Boice and Judge Cal Lester are going to do a Maypole dance next Monday during the annual Orange May Day celebration. And that City Attorney Gordon Richmond is going to play bagpipes or something, while Chief of Police George Franz sings.

My informant wouldn't absolutely guarantee his tip as authentic, but he seemed quite enthusiastic about the possibilities of such a celebration!

If this startling news is true, it's probably to take the place of the threatened dedication of the municipal swimming pool last fall, when the city council was to appear for the first plunge dressed as mermaids, but failed to keep the engagement.

If it isn't true, the rest of the celebration's going to be good, anyway, although V. D. Johnson admitted they were three days late in setting the affair for May 3!

George Blaisdell from Costa Mesa pops in, all hopped up about his American Legion dance at Costa Mesa May 7.

It seems that the boys are attempting to raise funds for a new clubhouse. They are, he claims, going to put on one of the best dances ever held in that district, with dancing acts and all sorts of entertainment. So, if you like to dance and want to aid a good cause, mark down May 7 in the date book.

George Kellogg waxes highly enthusiastic over tomorrow night's meeting of the Imperial Highway association. He even invited me to come, and I was thinking seriously of doing so until I found it wasn't to be in Yorba Linda, but at Murrieta Springs.

That's a long way to travel, even to meet with the highwaymen! He guarantees a wonderful meal, however, and an even better meeting after, so if you're interested in highways, especially long, fast, straight ones, plan to be there!

Jim Farquhar in his Huntington Beach News gets off another of his good ones. Jim's always saying something worth repeating, like this:

"The apostle of Father Divine may have deceived this girl a little about her being the Virgin Mary, but the story I read didn't say anything about her giving him back the $400 fur coat."

Something I've been wanting to mention for some time and forgot. A story today reminded me. The Costa Mesa chamber of commerce plan for finding work for folks in their community.

It seems that some of the bright boys thought up the idea of starting a sort of community employment bureau, and it's working perfectly already. In these hard times, there are more jobs than there are workers, and many permanent positions have been arranged for residents in need of work.

Isn't that an idea that could be used in most towns, without folks having to appeal to federal or state agencies? And wouldn't it be more pleasant for John Jones (or Smith) to apply at his own chamber of commerce for a job, rather than to someone else?

That's only one of several good ideas now in vogue in that town. It seems that the chamber suddenly has sprouted out with ideas, such as buying new fixtures for firetrucks and starting yard and garden contests and cleanup weeks and such things.

Before long they'll be annexing Newport Beach and Santa Ana!

Speaking of Newport, my good friend Frank Rinehart, the city clerk down there, finally apologized for putting a tax on the Gaines navy, which at the time was reposing under a pepper tree, miles from the water.

Frank didn't say he was sorry for the injustice, but he admitted that I probably wouldn't be declared illegals or delinquent or something, which was all that I wanted!

So the navy's safe for another year!

Rites Held For Newport Man

COSTA MESA.—Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at Dixon's chapel for Wells Jerome Truax, 60, who died Friday night at his home, 207 Nineteenth street, Newport Beach.

A resident of Newport for the past 25 years, Mr. Truax was in the employ of the city for a number of years. Surviving are his wife, Mary; two sons, Harry and Donald; and five daughters, Leona, Ruth, Dorothy, Jane and Bernice. Interment was in the Long Beach cemetery.

ANAHEIM HIGHWAY DEDICATION RITE SET FOR TOMORROW

KELLY TO BE SPEAKER ON PROGRAM

Parade and Luncheon to Feature Manchester Opening Ceremony

ANAHEIM.—Completion of the program for dedication of Manchester highway tomorrow has been announced by city officials, who have cut time of the opening ceremony to 45 minutes. Earl Lee Kelly, state director of public works, will speak at the ceremony, which starts at 11 a. m.

The affair will open with a parade, which will start at 10:30 a. m. from the city hall. As a motor caravan, led by the Anaheim Union High school band, the civic representatives will travel to Manchester avenue and Lincoln boulevard, where caravans from other communities will join the parade.

Mayor Charles H. Mann will give the address of welcome, to be followed by Kelly's talk and remarks by Highway Commissioner P. A. Stanton, chairman of the chamber's highway committee.

After the dedicatory program an informal luncheon will be held in the Anaheim Elks club, with introduction of dignitaries and short talks slated. Harry K. Arthur is in charge of arrangements.

LEGION PLANS MAY DANCE

COSTA MESA.—Members of Costa Mesa American Legion post No. 455 are sponsoring their annual May dance Friday evening, May 7, it was announced today by George Blaisdell, who is in charge of the affair.

The dance will be held in the Costa Mesa Woman's clubhouse, he said, and the public is invited to attend. Nine acts from the Putnam School of Dancing, with entertainers in charge of Miss Mary Moore, also are slated on the program, he said. Excellent music has been arranged for the dance, which is for the purpose of raising funds for a new Legion hall.

Assisting Blaisdell are Harold Grauel, Sam Crawford and J. R. Thompson.

CLUB MEETS IN ORANGE HOME

ORANGE.—Mrs. Herbert Sturgis entertained members of the Chat and Sew club at her home on North Center street Tuesday night and was assisted in serving by Mrs. Edwin Wescott. Mr. and Mrs. Sturgis are new residents of Orange, coming here from South Dakota.

Present were Mesdames Ensley Campbell, J. T. McInnis, Vern O. Estes, Earl G. Smith, E. C. Frevert, Earl Wood, Wilbur Woods, Carl Pister, Oliver Wickesheim and Miss Edna Case, Orange; Mrs. Ted Nail and Mrs. Dale Griggs, Santa Ana, and Mrs. Millie Buchanan, Bridgeport, Ill.; grandmother of Mrs. Griggs.

PLAN H. B. GOLF TOURNAMENT

HUNTINGTON BEACH.—A golf tournament, sponsored by the chamber of commerce, Windsor club, Rotary club and Woman's club will be held at the local links Sunday, with nine hole qualifying starting at 11 o'clock.

Many local golf enthusiasts are planning an all-day affair with picnic lunch at the club at noon. The golf club was recently taken under the management of M. C. Aldridge and his son who have made extensive improvements to the links.

Shower Honors Orange Woman

ORANGE.—A layette shower honoring Mrs. Alvin Schmetzen was given Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Myrtle Shaffer, North Tustin street, with Miss Helen Drinkgern as assistant hostess.

A two-course supper was served to Mesdames Ernest Unzelmann, Walter Roby, Herman Hark, Winkler Meyer and Misses Esther Bandick and Martha Unzelmann, Orange; Mrs. Stanley Hardin, Margaret Krause and Eunice Eckhoff, Santa Ana; Mrs. Ed Schlueter, Anaheim and Mrs. Kai Heidemann, Corona Del Mar.

Sewing Club in Visit to Hemet

ORANGE.—A sewing club, one of whose members now live in Hemet, was entertained there Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Frank Bandick, former Orange resident. A pot-luck luncheon was served at noon.

Attending were Mesdames Robert Borchard, Julius Borchard, Ed Henet, Edna Wilke, Alfred Huhn, Henry Bandick and E. H. Drinkgern, Orange, and Mrs. Charles Heim, Olive.

ARCHITECTS TO HEAR TALK IN LAGUNA CONFERENCE

LAGUNA BEACH.—Continuing their three-day conference, members of the College of Architecture and Fine Arts, University of Southern California, will meet tonight at Hotel Laguna.

Speakers will be Dean A. C. Weatherhead of the college of architecture at U. S. C., whose topic will be "City Planning and Civic Pride"; Mary Evans, student speaker, will discuss "The Use of Glass in the Home"; and Norman Entwistle, "City Hall Problem."

The chamber of commerce trophy for the winning civic center design is to be awarded at the close of the program, and will be followed by a skit on the city hall theme by U. S. C. students.

The program for tomorrow includes a painting and sketching class tour from 9 a. m. to noon under the direction of Paul S. Sample. From 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. an exhibition and architectural clinic will be held at the Chevrolet garage on Forest avenue with judging and awarding of prizes for the three winning sketches.

Alexander Levy, New York architect now living in Laguna, has invited visiting students to inspect the home he has designed in the Aliso district for Paul Mooney and Richard Halliburton.

PORT NOT CROWDED---YET

NEWPORT.—"For Rent" signs still can be found in Newport-Balboa in spite of any reports that this resort has been booked up solid for the summer, according to A. J. Twist, president of the Newport Harbor Realty Board.

Reservations have been made much earlier this year than have been the case in recent seasons, he admitted, drawing attention to the fact that thousands more vacationists are expected at this popular beach and boating pleasure place than ever before.

Name Committees For Brotherhood

GARDEN GROVE.—Committees for the Garden Grove Community Brotherhood for the coming year were chosen recently at a meeting of newly elected officers, the president, J. G. Allen, announced today.

Appointed to the membership committee were L. A. Young, F. A. Monroe and Emmett Smith; publicity, Vernon King, H. A. Lake and Robert Smith; program, Wayne Holt, J. A. Knapp, Dr. Charles F. Seitter and the Rev. W. J. Knoch; music, I. F. German, Leland Green and J. L. Hoganson; reception, P. M. German, Allen Goldard and Ralph Chaffee; service, Harvey Emley, J. H. Cockerham and A. L. ## HIGHWAY MEN TO MEET AT MURRIETTA

YORBA LINDA.—Members of the Imperial Highway association will meet tomorrow at Murrietta Hot Springs for their annual business and social session, Secretary George Kellogg announced today.

Featuring the program will be presentation of a state highway colored motion picture, showing development of state roads since advent of the automobile. Kellogg said.

President Bob Hayes of El Centro will be in charge of the business meeting, at which reports of progress of the highway, which eventually will extend from El Segundo to El Centro, will be made by delegates.

Development of the Orange county portion of the road now is at a standstill, but work is expected to start soon on the Carolina avenue-Yorba Linda stretch, it was announced.

SHRINERS MEET AT ORANGE

ORANGE.—The Orange unit of the Orange county Shrine club, under the direction of Clyde F. Newton, vice president, served as host to 300 members of the county club and delegation from the Pasadena Shrine club Tuesday evening at the American Legion hall.

Beginning with a turkey dinner at which County President Otto Evans, Fullerton, presided, a program was given which featured an address of welcome by Judge Frank C. Drumm, Santa Ana; introduction of D. Eymann Huff, first president of the club, which was organized in 1919; accordion music by the Pasadena club, and music by a federal music project saxophone quartet.

A chorus of 26 voices under the direction of Mrs. Dudley Paige Harper, Santa Ana, sang several numbers, and Benjamin Edwards, director of the Humana capella choir of Fullerton junior college, also sang. A trio of Ellen and Katherine Collins and Wanda Thompson, Anaheim, sang, with Miss Elizabeth Hunziker at the piano.

Potentate Lawrence Cobb and Secretary George Ramsey, patrons, chatters, temple guards and stage crew all were introduced, as were the vice presidents of the county club, one for each town. These were: Orange, Clyde Newton; Brea, Ralph E. Barnes; Huntington Beach, William A. Green; Placentia, S. James Tuffree; El Toro, Bonnie W. Osterman; La Habra, Charles A. Raggio; Laguna Beach, Frank B. Champion; Tustin, Charles F. Cogan; San Clemente, Dan Mulholland; Garden Grove, Dick Hasten; San Juan Capistrano, Carl H. Hankey; Newport-Balboa, Fred Stry; Fullerton, Ole Cole; Yorba Linda, Bert Shaw, and Anaheim, Harry B. Pearson.

Neel Murbarger, chairman of the clean-up committee reported that more than 100 personal calls have been made in the past month by himself and R. G. Chambers, who in several instances had resulted in property owners painting their houses and outbuildings and disposing of trash piles.

George Ragan, garden contest committee member, reported that a definite closing date of Sept. 1

EL MODENA.—A program, "American Music in Pageantry," will be presented by pupils of the El Modena schools Thursday evening in the Roosevelt school, with the public invited. Mrs. Mary Daugherty, music supervisor, is director.

The program includes "Indian Rhythms and Chants," by grades seven and eight; "Pilgrims Go To Church," grades three and four; "Spirit of '76," grades seven and eight; "Minuet," girls of grades five and six; "Star Spangled Banner and '49ers," boys' chorus; "Old Black Joe," chorus group; "Spirituals," boys and girls' chorus groups; "Turkey in the Straw," grades one and two; "Stars of the Summer Night," girls' chorus; "Most of the Best Music Is Religious," boys' chorus, and "Finale," entire chorus group.

STANTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Troutman, who recently moved to Garden Grove, were hosts at a dinner in their new home Monday night.

Present were Mr. and Mrs. King Rutledge, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Davis, Katherine Rutledge and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rutledge, all of Stanton; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ganser and Lynette Ganser, Tustin; Norman Essig, Orange; Andrew Carpenter and Eva Watkins, Anaheim; Francis Taft, San Jose; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Labourette and William Poe, Los Alamitos, and Evelyn Griffith, Montebello.

Change Orange Insurance Plan

ORANGE.—A complete reorganization of the insurance plan covering the elementary schools was effected Tuesday afternoon at a special meeting of the elementary school board.

Insurance amounting to $175,500 covering the various buildings and fixtures was distributed among 14 local insurance brokers. The policies are on a five-year plan. The action was announced by Superintendent of Schools C. I. Thomas.

Orange Building Committee Meets

ORANGE.—Members of the chamber of commerce housing committee, formed to stimulate building of homes in the city, met Tuesday afternoon and discussed ways and means to achieve their purpose.

It was announced that a file of floor plans, furniture and electrical fixture designs are on display at the chamber rooms. Louis Koth is chairman of the group.

When present plans are completed, it is hoped to assist prospective builders to finance their operations.

FIRE PROTECTION STEPS TAKEN BY MESA C. OF C.

COSTA MESA.—Steps to bring greater fire protection to Costa Mesa residents were taken Monday evening at a chamber of commerce meeting, when it was decided to purchase 20 fire-heads from the City of Anaheim, to be installed here.

These fire-heads, which will fit any standard hose connection and which would be of great aid in case of a blaze, will be purchased by the chamber and resold to property owners, who may club together for the purchase, it was announced.

One applicant for the job of collecting garbage has agreed to purchase a tract of waste land for the purpose of dumping refuse if the people of Costa Mesa will guarantee him a salary of $75 per month. The matter was referred to Emil Greener, who will investigate land available.

L. R. Daughenbaugh, chairman of the committee on drainage, reported that following presentation of a resolution to N. E. West two weeks ago, work had begun immediately on pumping dry the pond on Santa Ana avenue, which crossed the street. This work will be finished by Saturday.

Daughenbaugh reported that little hope was held for ponds on private property to be drained at the county's expense, nor was much encouragement given for installation of permanent drainage.

A. L. Pinkley, head of the committee on employment, stated that his office had been functioning successfully, jobs being provided about as fast as labor is available. Four men have been placed in steady positions and 15 others in part time jobs, he said. In the field work division, the demand for help has succeeded the supply.

Neel Murbarger, chairman of the clean-up committee reported that more than 100 personal calls have been made in the past month by himself and R. G. Chambers, who in several instances had resulted in property owners painting their houses and outbuildings and disposing of trash piles.

ORANGE GARDEN CLUB ELECTS

ORANGE.—Mrs. H. O. Russell was named president of the garden section of the Women's club, Tuesday at a meeting in the clubhouse. Mrs. Vernon Shippee was first vice president; Mrs. Perry Grout, second vice president; Mrs. George E. Peterson was reelected recording secretary; Mrs. Fred Alden, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. H. F. Taylor, treasurer.

Miss Elizabeth Bodger, El Monte, was the speaker, showing colored slides of new plants. Plans were completed for the annual flower show, sponsored by the section, to be held May 6 and 7. Mrs. Perry Grout, outgoing president, is general chairman of the show. After the meeting the members visited the Logan Jackson garden in Santa Ana.

Husbands Feted By Stanton Club

STANTON.—Members of the Sunshine n' Shower club, entertained their husbands at the monthly dinner and 500 party Saturday night at the commissary hall.

Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. William Pesterfield, Mr. and Mrs. Halsell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carr, Lee Benson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bushnell, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moolick, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Will Dudley, Mrs. O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Ennis Sayre, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sowers and Mrs. Peg Morgan, Los Angeles.

Prize winners were Mrs. Pesterfield, Mrs. Pollock, Milton Halsell and Conn Pollock.

PHOTOGRAPH CONTEST IS ANNOUNCED

NEWPORT - BALBOA.—Arrangements have been completed for a harbor photographic contest, with prizes totaling $200, officials of the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce announced today.

Any picture entered must be taken during the 11 weeks of the contest, which opens May 1 and closes July 17. It was announced. First prize will be $100, with $25 for second place, $15 for third, and $10 for fourth.

Photographers may choose their own subjects which may include outdoor shots, interiors, actions, or stills. Two outstanding judges of photographic art have been selected to pass upon the merits of the pictures submitted, and all photos will be placed on display for the month of August at the grammar school at Newport Beach, which has recently completed a fine auditorium building, admirably suited to this purpose.

GROVE JUNIOR CLUB MEETS

GARDEN GROVE.—The Junior Woman's Civic club of Garden Grove, meeting Tuesday evening at the West Garden Grove boulevard home of Mrs. Dorothy Gedney, elected officers for the coming year following a report of the nominating committee submitted by Mrs. Dorothy Lake.

Elected were Miss Dorothy Knapp, president; Miss Frances Hammon, vice president; Miss Ruby Aabel, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Virginia Williams, corresponding secretary; and Miss Eleanor Wisner, federation secretary.

Final details for the bridge and fashion show to be given May 11 at 7:30 o'clock in the clubhouse were announced by the general chairman, Miss Edith Nichols.

The president-elect was named delegate to the state convention at Coronado, May 14 and 15, and Mrs. Dorothy Lake alternate. Miss Blanche Gwynn and Mrs. Helen Gedney as chaperones assisted in serving refreshments.

CHAPTER XXXIV

NITA's face was startlingly white. "Nick!" she cried, moving quickly toward him. "Nita," he said, "Martha is here—this is Martha."

Nita sank down beside his bed. "Then it's all over between you and me," she whispered tragically.

"No," said Martha, quietly. "Nick and I have broken our engagement. I want him to be happy with you. He loves you."

Nick spoke sharply. "That's not true! Nita and I—"

"Hush, Nick," said Martha. "You are ill—you must not talk too much."

"I'll?" Nita stared at him. "Oh, Nick, darling!"

"Yes," Martha went on. "He was shot—accidentally."

"Then Gregory did wound you?" cried Nita.

Gregory! It came to Martha that Gregory, the pianist, with whom she had walked in the rain last night. He had talked wildly of a "night made for murder." So it was he who had shot Nick! But why? Was he, too, in love with Nita?

"Could I speak with Nick alone for a few minutes—if you don't mind Miss Halliday..."

"Of course," said Martha, coolly. With her head held high, she wheeled, deaf to Nick's calling her name.

Just outside the door, she saw a yellow slip of paper lying on the floor. She picked it up—saw, at a glance, that it was a telegram to Nita. Nick. Nita must have dropped it.

Before Martha realized it, her eyes had taken in the words of the message—"I wish I had my life to live over again, because it was all belong to you." Martha flushed. She knew now that she had been right in sticking to her determination to break with Nick—he was quite clear where his heart lay, despite his penitent words.

With the telegram still in her hand, Martha went back to her room to await Barry's return.

IT WAS about an hour later when he came. Martha met him in the servants' lounge. His face was haggard with weariness, but lit up in time to make the last edition of tonight's paper.

Martha cried out compassionately. "But Barry, you can't make that trip now! You're worn out. Wait—please."

"No—I must get started. This story is too important—even though you won't let me use all of it."

"Yes—I know," said Martha. "Some day, Barry, I hope I can repay you."

She was trying so hard, he thought, to make things easier for him.

"Well—goodbye," he said. He held her hand for just an instant, then turned abruptly and without a backward glance, walked out.

JEFFERSON

Jefferson Parent-Teacher association will sponsor a rummage sale tomorrow and Saturday at the Finley building, 412 East Fourth street, with Mrs. Clarence Bond as general chairman.

Dahl, citizenship and recreation; Mrs. Fred Wilson, home service. Preceding the meeting, Mrs. Marshall presided over a meeting of her executive board.

M'KINLEY

Members of last year's board of McKinley Parent-Teacher association are rehearsing a one-act comedy, "Waiting for the Train," for the amateur show which the organization is sponsoring on the evening of May 12 at the school.

Other numbers are being presented by the pupils, and proceeds will go into a fund for purchasing drapes for the school auditorium.

LINCOLN

Room mothers of Lincoln school are to serve tea at the school during "visiting day" tomorrow, serving in both the morning and afternoon to the parents and friends who visit classes during the day. This is a part of the Public Schools Week observance in the city.

Honor Society Initiates Five

Five men students at Santa Ana Junior college were honored last night by being initiated into Beta Gamma, extra-curricular honor society. The meeting was held in the home of Helena Bailey, 311 East Washington avenue.

Those taken into the society were Lawrence Trickey, Dick Phillips, Allen Tintensor, Albert Fickhardt and Kenneth Nissley. The new members met the requirements of the society by having contributed something to the college through their extra-curricular activities.

Plans were discussed for a beach party to be taken by Beta Gamma members May 29, 30, 31. Betty Lee, Mary Paxton and Helena Bailey were selected on the food committee. Discussion was also held on the annual $25 award given the outstanding student at graduation.

Value of Farm Lands Climbing

WASHINGTON. (AP)—The bureau of agricultural economics said today farm lands were valued at 85 per cent of pre-war levels for the year ended March 1. This compared with 82 per cent for a year earlier, a low of 73 in 1933, and the peak of 170 during the 1920 land boom.

Convention Time Is Near

Less than a month away, the coming convention of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers is drawing the attention of Parent-Teacher members all over the state, hundreds having already made reservations for rooms and meetings during the four days.

Mrs. Harry C. Drown, president of Fourth District P-T. A., urges all going from this county to make reservations with her at once, as all rooms in the headquarters hotels will soon be filled.

Reservations for the district dinner, which will be at 6 p. m., May 25 in the Hotel Constance, are also being taken, and must be in the hands of Mrs. C. W. Eggleston, 1416 Louise street, Santa Ana, by May 10, which is the absolute deadline, according to Mrs. Drown.

Mrs. Floyd Mitchell, new president of Santa Ana Council of Parents and Teachers, asks that all Santa Ana reservations for the district dinner be made with her as soon as possible.

There will be no presidents' council in Fourth district next month, Mrs. Drown states, because of the state convention which will take the place of it. The last district meeting of the year will be on June 3, it is announced.

Dinner for Farm Group Monday

Associated Farmers of Orange county will hold their annual banquet Monday evening at the Ebell clubhouse.

Philip Bancroft of Oakland will be the principal speaker. There will be a musical program including saxophone numbers by Les Phillips and accordion numbers by Miss May Weyer.

The organization is composed of farmers, packers and business people. Holmes Bishop, Orange citrus grower, is president.

When Man Knows — Man Is Secure

FROM the cradle to the grave man's life is an evolution from one plane of understanding to another. First he is the child, learning to walk, safe in the knowledge that others will do everything for his comfort and security. Later, sometimes all too early in his years, he comprehends that he is the victim of poverty, that he must wage battle with the economic forces of existence to survive. But somehow, as he passes through the fleeting years of adolescence, into young manhood and into his twenties and thirties, he becomes arrogant and confident. The world is his to command. He has only to move ahead, use his intelligence—and there will be security for the morrow.

However, he is not so confident in his forties or in his fifties. He sees that life is short; that there is yet much to be done that he is far from accomplishing. And at last, when he is in the sunset of his years—when he looks back on the broad Highway of Life—he understands that it is Wisdom, and Wisdom alone that makes for contented and successful living.

SUCCESSFUL living is not measured in terms of dollars and cents. It matters little when man approaches the end of life's highway whether he has millions in gold or that modest sufficiency with which to keep the wolf of destitution from his door. But it is in these years, when man looks back along the road of time, that he realizes that he has not been one person, but several, each with separate and distinct personalities. Man's nature, his outlook upon life, the broadening of his desires, his ideals, and the scope of his intellect change every five to ten years.

HOPES, ambitions and dreams, so important in the teens and early twenties, are of little moment in the thirties. And when man has passed fifty, when he is sixty, seventy and eighty, he realizes that he did not begin to fall into the full stride of his intellect until his forties—that span of ten years which science has identified as the normal half-way mark in human life. Sometimes that span of years—when man begins to reach his highest intellectual level—comes earlier, and sometimes it is not reached until the fifties, but assuredly it is the most important period of life.

***
It is here that man learns that all existence revolves about wisdom—or the lack of it. He discerns that wisdom is the high equation of all that is healthy, normal, happy, prudent and charitable, and that wisdom must co-ordinate every phase of life into a logical, intelligent unity.

WISDOM is the mellowing quality of all life. Reduced to its basic equations and stripped of all non-essentials, Wisdom is the one quality to which all humankind aspires. The magic wand of Lady Luck may play some important role in every life, but it is Wisdom which guides man to safe and sound behavior. The wisdom that comes from long years of education, training and association with those who have already achieved it, is that quality which discerns beauty in the sunset . . . which sees the laughter in the eyes of childhood . . . which pays tribute to the patience of motherhood . . . which worships at the shrine of the home and all of the idealism of which it is symbolic.

WISDOM thinks straight, and it thinks in honest vein. It separates truth from untruth, and it permits man—when at last he is capable of such thought—to gaze back into time and discern how much happier and more worthwhile might have been the course of his destiny had he but known, had he but understood and had he but been possessed of the full realization that much which he did was foolish, extravagant, selfish, thoughtless—and so utterly useless to himself and the good of those about him.

Wisdom, it has been said, comes only from experience. But if man would acquire wisdom earlier in his years, many of his most costly, exasperating and heart-breaking experiences would never have been experienced!

Here's Lindbergh's Story Of Wild Night Leap Into Space!

—AS "TOLD AT THE EXPLORERS' CLUB"

By Charles A. Lindbergh

TOOK OFF from Lambert (St. Louis) Field, September 16, 1926, at 4:25 p.m. and, after an uneventful trip, arrived at Springfield, Ill., at 5:10 p.m. and Peoria at 5:55 p.m. I took off from the Peoria Field at 6:10 p.m. There was a light ground haze, but the sky was practically clear, containing only scattered cumulus clouds.

Darkness set in about twenty-five miles northeast of Peoria and I took up a compass course, checking on the lights of the town below, until a low fog rolled in under me a few miles northeast of Marseilles and the Illinois River. The fog extended from the ground up to about six hundred feet and, as I was unable to fly under it, I turned back and attempted to drop a flare and land, but the flare did not function and I again headed for Maywood, hoping to find a break in the fog over the field. Upon examination I discovered that the cause of the flare failure was the short length of the release lever and that the flare might still be used by pulling out the release cable.

I continued on a compass course of fifty degrees until 7:15 p.m., when I saw a dull glow on the top of the fog, indicating a town below. There were several of these light patches on the fog, visible only when looking away from the moon, and I knew them to be the towns bordering the Maywood Field. At no time, however, was I able to locate the exact position of the field, although I understand that the searchlights were directed upward and two barrels of gasoline were burned in an endeavor to attract my attention.

Several times I descended to the top of the fog, which was eight to nine hundred feet high according to my altimeter. The sky above was clear, with the exception of scattered clouds, and the moon and stars were shining brightly.

After circling around for thirty-five minutes, I headed west, to be sure of clearing Lake Michigan and in an attempt to pick up one of the lights on the transcontinental line. After flying west for fifteen minutes and seeing no break in the fog, I turned southwest, hoping to strike the edge of the fog south of the Illinois River.

My motor cut out at 8:20 p.m. and I cut in the reserve. I was at that time only 1,500 feet high and, as the motor did not pick up as soon as I expected, I shoved the flashlight in my belt and was about to release the parachute flare and jump when the engine finally took hold again. A second trial showed the main tank to be dry and accordingly a maximum of twenty minutes' flying-time left.

There were no openings in the fog and I decided to leave the ship as soon as the reserve tank was exhausted. I tried to get the mail pit open, with the idea of throwing out the mail sacks and then jumping, but was unable to open the front buckle.

I knew that the risk of fire, with no gasoline in the tanks, was very slight and began to climb for altitude when I saw a light on the ground for several seconds. This was the first light I had seen for nearly two hours and, as almost enough gasoline for fifteen minutes' flying remained in the reserve, I glided down to twelve hundred feet and pulled out the flare-release cable, as nearly as I could judge over the spot where the light had appeared. This time the flare functioned, but only to illuminate the top of a solid bank of fog, into which it soon disappeared without showing any trace of the ground.

Seven minutes' gasoline remained in the gravity tank. Seeing the glow of a town through the fog, I turned towards open country and nosed the plane up. At 5,000 feet the motor sputtered and died. I stepped up on the cowl and out over the right side of the cockpit, pulling the rip-cord after about a hundred-foot fall. The parachute, an Irvin seat-service type, functioned perfectly; I was falling head downward when the risers jerked me into an upright position and the chute opened. This time I saved the rip-cord.

I pulled the flashlight from my belt and was playing it down towards the top of the fog when I heard the plane's motor pick up. When I jumped, the motor had practically stopped dead and I had neglected to cut the switches. Apparently, when the ship nosed down, an additional supply of gasoline drained down to the carburetor. Soon the ship came into sight, about a quarter-mile away and headed in the general direction of my parachute. I put the flashlight in a pocket of my flying suit, preparatory to slipping the parachute out of the way, if necessary. The plane was making a left spiral of about a mile diameter and passed approximately three hundred yards away from my chute, leaving me on the outside of the circle.

I was undecided as to whether the plane or I was descending more rapidly and glided my chute away from the spiral path of the ship as rapidly as I could.

The ship passed completely out of sight, but reappeared again in a few seconds, its rate of descent being about the same as that of the parachute. I counted five spirals, each one a little further away than the last, before reaching the top of the fog-bank.

When I settled into the fog-bank, I knew that the ground was within 1,000 feet and I reached for the flashlight, but found it to be missing. I could see neither earth nor stars and had no idea what kind of territory was below. I crossed my legs to keep from straddling a branch or wire, guarded my face with my hands and waited.

Presently I saw the outline of the ground and the corn was over my head and the chute was lying on top of the cornstalks. I hurriedly packed it and started down a corn row. The ground visibility was about one hundred yards.

In a few minutes I came to a stubble field and some wagon tracks, which I followed to a farmyard a quarter-mile away. After reaching the farmyard, I noticed auto headlights and a spotlight playing over the roadside. Thinking that someone might have located the wreck of the plane, I walked over to the car. The occupants asked whether I had heard an airplane crash and it required some time to explain to them that I had been piloting the plane and was searching for it myself. I had to display the parachute as evidence before they were thoroughly convinced. The farmer was sure, as were most others in a three-mile radius, that the ship had just missed his house and crashed near by. In fact, he could locate within a few rods the spot where he heard it hit the ground, and we spent an unsuccessful quarter-hour hunting for the wreck in that vicinity before going to the farmhouse to arrange for a searching party and telephone St. Louis and Chicago.

I had just put in the long-distance calls when the phone rang and we were notified that the plane had been found in a cornfield over two miles away.

It took several minutes to reach the site of the crash, due to the necessity of slow driving through the fog. A small crowd had already assembled when we arrived.

The plane was wound up in a ball-shaped mass. It had narrowly missed one farmhouse and had hooked its left wing in a grain shock a quarter-mile beyond. The ship had landed on the left wing and wheel and had skidded along the ground for eighty yards, going through one fence before coming to rest in the edge of a cornfield, about a hundred yards short of a barn. The mail pit was laid open and one sack of mail was on the ground. The mail however, was uninjured.

The sheriff from Ottawa arrived and we took the mail to the Ottawa post office, to be entrained at 3:30 a.m. for Chicago.

Wink... The Indian Sandman

By R. Remlow Harris

WHEN the Sun went in his wigwam
And shut off the warmth and light,
It was then that small papooses
Were supposed to shut eyes tight.

But they didn't always do it,
So their mothers called for Wink,
Who came and brought his helpers,
And they made papooses blink.

They would tickle cheeks with feathers,
They would brush each little lid,
While Wink would hum "Sleep Tightly,"
And soon papoose would do as bid.

Wink was something like the Sandman—
Only he was far more gay—
All papooses liked his humming,
Which for them meant close of day.

Of course no Indian ever saw Wink,
He was far too shrewd and wise.
He would hide behind an eyebrow,
Till the young one shut both eyes.

Then when little papoose shut them,
Wink would seal each fast with sleep—
And papoose might dream he saw Wink,
But he could not wake to peep.

Hearty Laughs Make You Live Longer!

Whether It's Girlish Giggle—Or Loud
Hilarious Guffaw, It Brings Health And Happiness!

"Happy Hysteria"— the Sort That's Contagious.

NOTHING will bring a more serious expression to the face of a scientist than to consider the mystery of laughter.

People can—and do!—laugh at almost anything. Sometimes it is subtle humor, sometimes it is the droll two-edged philosophies of such men as the late Will Rogers, sometimes it is the gag, or wisecrack—and sometimes it is but the spontaneous outburst—the combination of a mental and physical reaction—to a specific circumstance or remark.

Laughter is a quality that goes all the way from a well modulated chuckle to a boisterous guffaw—and while no one is quite certain what produces it, or where it will express itself, it has been established that laughter is healthy. In fact, the man with a stimulating sense of humor is more likely to have a healthy mind and body than the one who has not.

It's almost impossible to show a man what is meant by something "funny" when he has never cultivated his "funny-bone," and lacks any sort of a sense of humor; to him a joke has little point, and he may be the finest kind of a fellow and still a quiet smile will be his limit. He isn't what is called a "risible" person, and it's quite useless to try and explain that intangible something which makes a situation "funny." But while in its mental aspects laughter remains a mystery, its definite physical reactions are many and all of them are beneficial. A good laugh affects the movement of the diaphragm and the activity of such organs as the heart, lungs, liver, pancreas, ductless glands, spleen and stomach—and helps each of these to do their work more efficiently by mildly increasing the circulation and acting as a kind of "vibratory massage" which heightens a person's resistance to disease. It may, physicians believe, add years to an individual's life.

To philosophers laughter is one of the qualities peculiar to mankind not shared by animals—although everyone who loves pets knows that while they may not actually laugh, they do often smile and show good nature and pleasure. A true sense of humor causing loud mirth is a different matter, and has been said to be a true test of civilization.

"Civilization once varied as the amount of soap used," said one scholar, "but the formula has changed, since soap is but skin deep and laughter goes all the way through!"

And the newest formula for vibrant physical well-being is health and laughter. In personal and business life, scientists report, the man who can chuckle at trouble has ten times more hope of maintaining his health than a man who is constantly upset and worried. Doctor's records show that—"people who like to laugh enjoy a longer and happier existence than those who are fretful and distraught, because laughs are good for the system!"

THE amazingly salutatory action of a hearty laugh is no respecter of persons. Other stimulants are hard to regulate, but a sound sense of humor is surrounded by natural safeguards that make it one of the rare habits patients are advised to acquire.

Trained psychologists see in laughter a balance to the fast pace of modern life. It becomes more impossible every year to determine where a physician's work ends and a psychiatrist's begins, for the activities of mind and body, according to scientists in both fields, are known to be so intricately dependent upon each other that few can say which is in actual control.

One thing is certain—researches have disclosed that from ancient times to the present age, philosophers, teachers and physicians have believed that a sense of humor was man's one weapon which no adverse fate could destroy.

Healthy and happy children laugh easily—young men at work and play laugh naturally and without effort—and mature men who have learned through experience that material success and failure are not all-important can chuckle when they look back over the past and consider that their mistakes were mostly due to taking themselves over seriously.

Certain kinds of mirth may result in dismay for others, as with a druggist who mixes a common household prescription for youngsters and imagine how their little faces will screw up in disdain when a spoonful of liquid is poured down unwilling throats—but his own laugh does him good. Probably his mind has been concerned with serious and puzzling matters of everyday business, and this moment's relaxation is a valuable tonic.

The most beneficial laugh of all is the one which is purely spontaneous, and springs from an immediate reaction to a happy event—almost any happy event! One classical example is the business man who has misjudged another in a little matter of an unpaid bill. He is convinced that George just doesn't intend to mail that payment. He sorts through his mail grumpily, expecting nothing good, certainly no check from George. But on opening the last letter good news leaps out at him with the first sentence: "Enclosed find check!" The skeptic can't help giving a great shout of laughter—even if it is at himself!

Even workers engaged in arduous, routine duties may find renewed zest by indulging in a whole-hearted gale of laughter. Among office employees, those best situated for this relaxation are telephone operators who hour after hour take and send calls, and occasionally by accident or design overhear an intimate family quarrel between the vice-president and his wife who, as everyone knows, are always fighting over trifles.
"So—the Smiths are at it again!" she chuckles, and scientists would approve, perhaps not her "listening in," but of the mental and physical stimulus.

A large number of recent books have been written about laughter and its true cause, but all theories agree that it is not yet fully understood. What makes people laugh? Scientists conclude that although it is natural for man to laugh, his surroundings have much to do with it.

People who have been brought up in homes where there is little humor are apt to be serious, reserved, and self-conscious. On the reverse side, children who have lived in happy, laughter-loving homes will laugh readily. In short, laughter is a habit.

ANOTHER discovery is that men laugh more than women, a condition supposedly due to long centuries of training when women were brought up with the commandment, "Be reserved—no lady laughs loudly!" And as a consequence the men of the family may burst into roars of laughter in which the women join with only mild enthusiasm.

Neurotics who are afflicted by countless trivial doubts and fears and sometimes show all the symptoms of a threatening disease have been persuaded by psychiatrists to take themselves less seriously, turn their minds to something else than their troubles—and to laugh! And, in a great number of cases, once the patient can laugh, he is cured!

No one recognizes more fully than an experienced surgeon the value of a cheerful mental attitude of a patient preparing for an operation and when convalescing. In these circumstances the surgeon prescribes a carefree mental state of which the best expression is laughter. Particularly is this important when conditions that follow an operation have become normal; then laughter is again a healthy function to be encouraged. Dr. Monderille, surgeon at the University of Paris, gave a rule approved by all:

"Let the surgeon take care to regulate the whole regimen of the patient's life for joy and happiness by promising that he will soon be well."

The medical world uses laughter as a definite stimulant, to increase the function of several organs, help the flow of blood to the ductless glands, and generally to raise the patient's resistance against microbes. One prominent scientist believes that laughter aids the blood to circulate more freely and is almost equivalent to introducing a fresh supply of blood into the veins . . . causing an effect distantly resembling a blood transfusion.

Medical men of today are daily demonstrating that age is not so much a matter of years as of mental attitude—and that thousands of men beyond the Biblical span of four score years and ten have enjoyed increased health, and greatly prolonged useful lives by a well developed sense of humor and a faculty of hearty laughter.

A sense of humor has never prevented death, and probably never will—yet it has been known to influence the manner in which a man dies, as when Sir Thomas More, sent to the scaffold for his expressed opinions, said to the headsman,
"Help me up these steps—as for my coming down, you can let me shift for myself."

From Schoolroom To Dream Castle!

Beauty, Ability And Persistence Transform Desires Of Madeleine Carroll Into Reality

Lovely Madeleine Carroll Who Revolted Against School Teaching to Begin Her Stage Career.

FROM NORTH, south, east and west pulchritude is on the road to Hollywood, the Mecca of beautiful women. The parade knows no national boundaries. From Germany came Marlene Dietrich, alluring and lovely; farther north, from the land of the Vikings, came Greta Garbo, the exotic; and the French have contributed Simone Simon.

But Madeleine Carroll goes a step beyond to claim the title of the "International Actress."

From her "Castle in Spain," her estate in Kenya Colony, Africa, her town house and her country house in England to her apartment in Hollywood Miss Carroll views the world as her home. "But most of my heart is in England," adds Miss Carroll modestly, "for that is where my husband, Captain Philip Astley, is stationed." And Madeleine is very much in love with that stalwart young husband of hers, and he is the one reason why America did not meet her sooner.

Twentieth Century-Fox had to offer her a fabulous sum—"It made me quite dizzy," she remarked, before she could be persuaded to leave her captain, and now she books passage back to England to see him every time there's a reasonable lull in production.

Besides conducting an excellent business in real estate in London, Captain Astley finds time to go hunting for big game in Africa which is the reason for the estate at Kenya Colony. Madeleine, while she calls it one of her homes, has never been to Kenya Colony, but she substantiated the rumor that she and Gary Cooper, with whom she has been co-starred, together with Gary's wife, Sandra Shaw, are planning to meet Captain Astley there next September for an extended hunting trip into the interior. Since Gary is a veteran in the "big game" field, Hollywood is anticipating the importation of some fierce looking cats and perhaps an elephant or two.

Madeleine Carroll is considered one of the few beautiful women of Hollywood who has a natural talent for acting. She is a boon to directors, for she usually conceives and presents her characters correctly from the start.

She considers February 26 as her day, and she is always careful to pay her respects to this date. Her mother was 26 years old when Madeleine was born on February 26. She also received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Birmingham University on this memorable date.

It was while she was at Birmingham that she received her first initiation to the stage. She was thrilled with the experience and determined to become an actress. Her parents, as parents often will, opposed the thought and refused to assist her. Undaunted, Madeleine packed her things and went to live in Brighton where she secured a position as a school teacher in a girls' seminary.

Teaching was distasteful and she stayed only long enough to accumulate $100, which was the capital she used to begin her stage career. Madeleine was beautiful and she possessed a native talent for projecting herself into character. Stage directors sensed this and she was soon on the high-road to fame and riches.

Between seasons on the stage she applied for extra work at one of the London studios and was given a leading role in a minor picture. Since that beginning she has played nothing but leading roles although she has alternated between the legitimate theater and film productions. Germany first borrowed her from England to make a silent picture. France followed suit, and she did several pictures in French under French direction before Hollywood finally enticed her to America.

Madeleine likes Hollywood, but she won't commit herself when friends suggest she make her home in the cinema city. "I couldn't confine myself to any one locality," she says, "not until I've been married 26 years, and that's a long time yet."

A good share of Madeleine's heart is devoted to her castle in Spain which is near the French border, only 45 miles from Catalonia. Here she has employed a bailiff and his family to look after her estate. Not long ago the bailiff wrote that the estate should be fenced at once. Madeleine had visions of the rebels, who were fighting only a few miles away, demolishing the place, but it proved the bailiff only wanted to keep out the rabbits.

It was just before Madeleine started work on her latest picture that she attempted to visit her Spanish estate. She arrived at the French-Spanish border at a time when the revolution was at its height. There she met a famous American news correspondent returning from a tour of the strife-stricken areas. The conflagration was throwing sparks over all Europe and the specter of another war loomed on the horizon.

"I was within an hour's drive of my dream—and it is a dream . . . that castle of mine . . . high on a hilltop with sloping green fields, and flanked on all sides with the romanticism of the Middle Ages—but I did not get to see it. The journalist warned me off." Madeleine remarks with no attempt to hide her gratitude. "Even though the revolution had not spread to the particular section where my castle stands, had I gone on I would have passed through a zone where the horrors of human suffering and misery were so vast that they would have remained to haunt me the rest of my life. He showed me a few pictures and told me of some of the things he had just seen along the road I proposed to take. His recital was enough. I turned back in a more serious vein of mind than I entered upon my excursion."

In the good old English fashion, Madeleine likes to walk. "Never take a street car when you can walk," is her motto. At precisely four o'clock every afternoon she has tea and she has done much toward making tea-totalers of her leading men.

Despite her restful appearance, her quiet, modest way, she is one of the most restless persons in Hollywood. She is intent on her career, which she intends to continue as an internationalist.

Loneliness, Ego — And The Telephone!

When Talkable Souls Talk And Talk, There's Scientific Reason—And What They're Doing Is "Putting On An Act"!

Premonition!

Exuberance!

THE ego urge is the one dominant factor which inspires men and women to go on what psychologists of the west have now labeled the telephone talking spree!

But they agree that there is another element of human emotion which also causes certain types of men and women to ring numbers, talk incessantly and give little regard to the courteous, forced interest of the party at the other end of the line.

That element, they say, is loneliness!

Sometimes the two factors combine themselves in one personality and then, so the psychologists assert, the result is a bore, for which there is no other designation.

This is not levity on the part of psychologists. Much thought and investigation have been given to various forms of human behavior and the use individuals make of the telephone has been found to be as definite an index into certain traits of character as that revealed when scientists employ the complicated lie detector to determine the mental reactions of a defendant, often innocent, who is subjected to myriad questions, some of them trivial and some of them important.

It is a long established fact that many men, mentally speaking, desire a "whipping post" for their temper. If something goes wrong, they blame it on the bookkeeper. If driving to work they run over a nail and puncture a tire—they blame it on an innocent wife who the day before had used the vehicle to attend a bridge tea. Similarly, psychologists point out, certain types of individuals seek a "looking-glass companionship." They do not care to whom they talk, as long as the other person will remain silent and let them talk about themselves. The telephone phobia is somewhat akin to this and, according to psychologists, the desire to inflict long monologues upon other persons springs from the well of delusions, wherein the human mind, to cover up some fancied sense of inferiority, builds up what might be termed "an act."

Persons afflicted with the greatest sense of timidity and self-consciousness when in the presence of others, somehow gain new confidence and a sense of grandeur when they reach for a telephone. All awkwardness vanishes. They become masters of their own destiny. They take command of the situation and enslave momentarily at least!—the person who, through courtesy or patience, is compelled to listen at the other end of the line.

When this harmless but nearly always annoying trait of character asserts itself in the form of "delusions of grandeur," as the scientists call it, a telephone conversation can begin now—and end painfully long hours later! Nearly always the person is also afflicted with a sense of loneliness, and it is this element—unfortunate for the listener—that develops the ego urge. Aunt Hettie calls her Cousin Harry. She has been lonely all day. Harry is a bachelor. He is home. He has the time to talk, and—Aunt Hettie tells herself—she ought to call him and cheer him up. In short, explain the psychologists, this is how Aunt Hettie's better sense of the proprieties justifies her urge for companionship. It is not Cousin Harry who is lonely. He is tired, he wants to read his paper, to be let alone and to doze by the radio. But Aunt Hettie is lonely. So she calls him.

her confidence, that makes her exuberant, that gives buoyancy to her delusions of grandeur and, after all, she is lonely!

Aunt Hettie, scientists admit, means no harm. Her life is barren of close associations and family ties or, lacking the proper interests and schedule of a well-ordered day, she intrudes unwittingly into the lives of others—through the telephone!—to give expression to herself.

In fact, the urge for self-expression, is why people talk and talk and talk for hours over telephones... until even Cousin Harry, the composite of all patient souls, surrenders to the droning voice of boredom, and falling asleep at the receiver switch, leaves the composite Aunt Hettie in high indignation just as she was reaching the crescendo of her ego monologue!

FIVE STAR FICTION By Jefferson Barclaye Layne

Death, An Idol And Unseen Enemy!

CAPTAIN MATTHEW HENDERSON, late of the Intelligence Division of the A. E. F. and more recently dividing his time between golfing, hunting, fishing and sleuthing, was having a severe attack of spring fever. Even his jig-saw puzzles which could be customarily depended upon to furnish relaxation, lay untouched on a bookshelf. His gaze wandered idly from the star-studded sky to the panoramic view of the skyline with its myriads of lighted windows and its imposing skyscrapers standing out in bold relief against a background of curiously sloping streets. Through another of the open French windows he glanced at the magic ribbon of steel reaching from the city across the bay.

"Look, David," he spoke, pointing at the ceaseless parade of headlights darting back and forth across the bridge, "they are all going somewhere. Either home or away for a weekend of fun."

"Yes, sir," the butler replied diffidently. "Shall I pack your bags, sir?"

As if hypnotized by the very sound of those words, Mat Henderson turned his back to the scene of enchantment. "Not a bad idea, David," he said. "But, please, for the six thousand nine hundred and fifty-eighth time, cut out the 'sir.' It seems utterly preposterous for two fellows who went through the World War together, doing the same kind of work, to be separated by a social chasm. Blast it all, David, when there are other people around, you are my butler only because you insist upon it. But when we are alone or working on a case, you are my friend and co-worker because I insist upon it. Do you understand that, David?"

"Yes, sir—er—beg pardon, sir—er—I mean, yes, Mat," the butler replied. David Huxley, who had met Mat Henderson in France while attached to the latter's headquarters as liaison officer for the British Intelligence Service, came from a splendid but impoverished English family. He was a born actor and felt equally at home in the kitchen preparing his master's breakfast or at a social function as Mat's inseparable companion.

The two men jerked around to face the doorway and in the gathering dusk of the early March evening discerned a smiling Oriental bowing apologetically. David Huxley slid one hand toward his hip pocket, but the Chinese reassured them at once.

"Excuse interruption, please, honorable gentlemen. My people know great detective like Chinamen. One of us needs you, honorable sir."

"How did you get in?" Mat Henderson demanded.

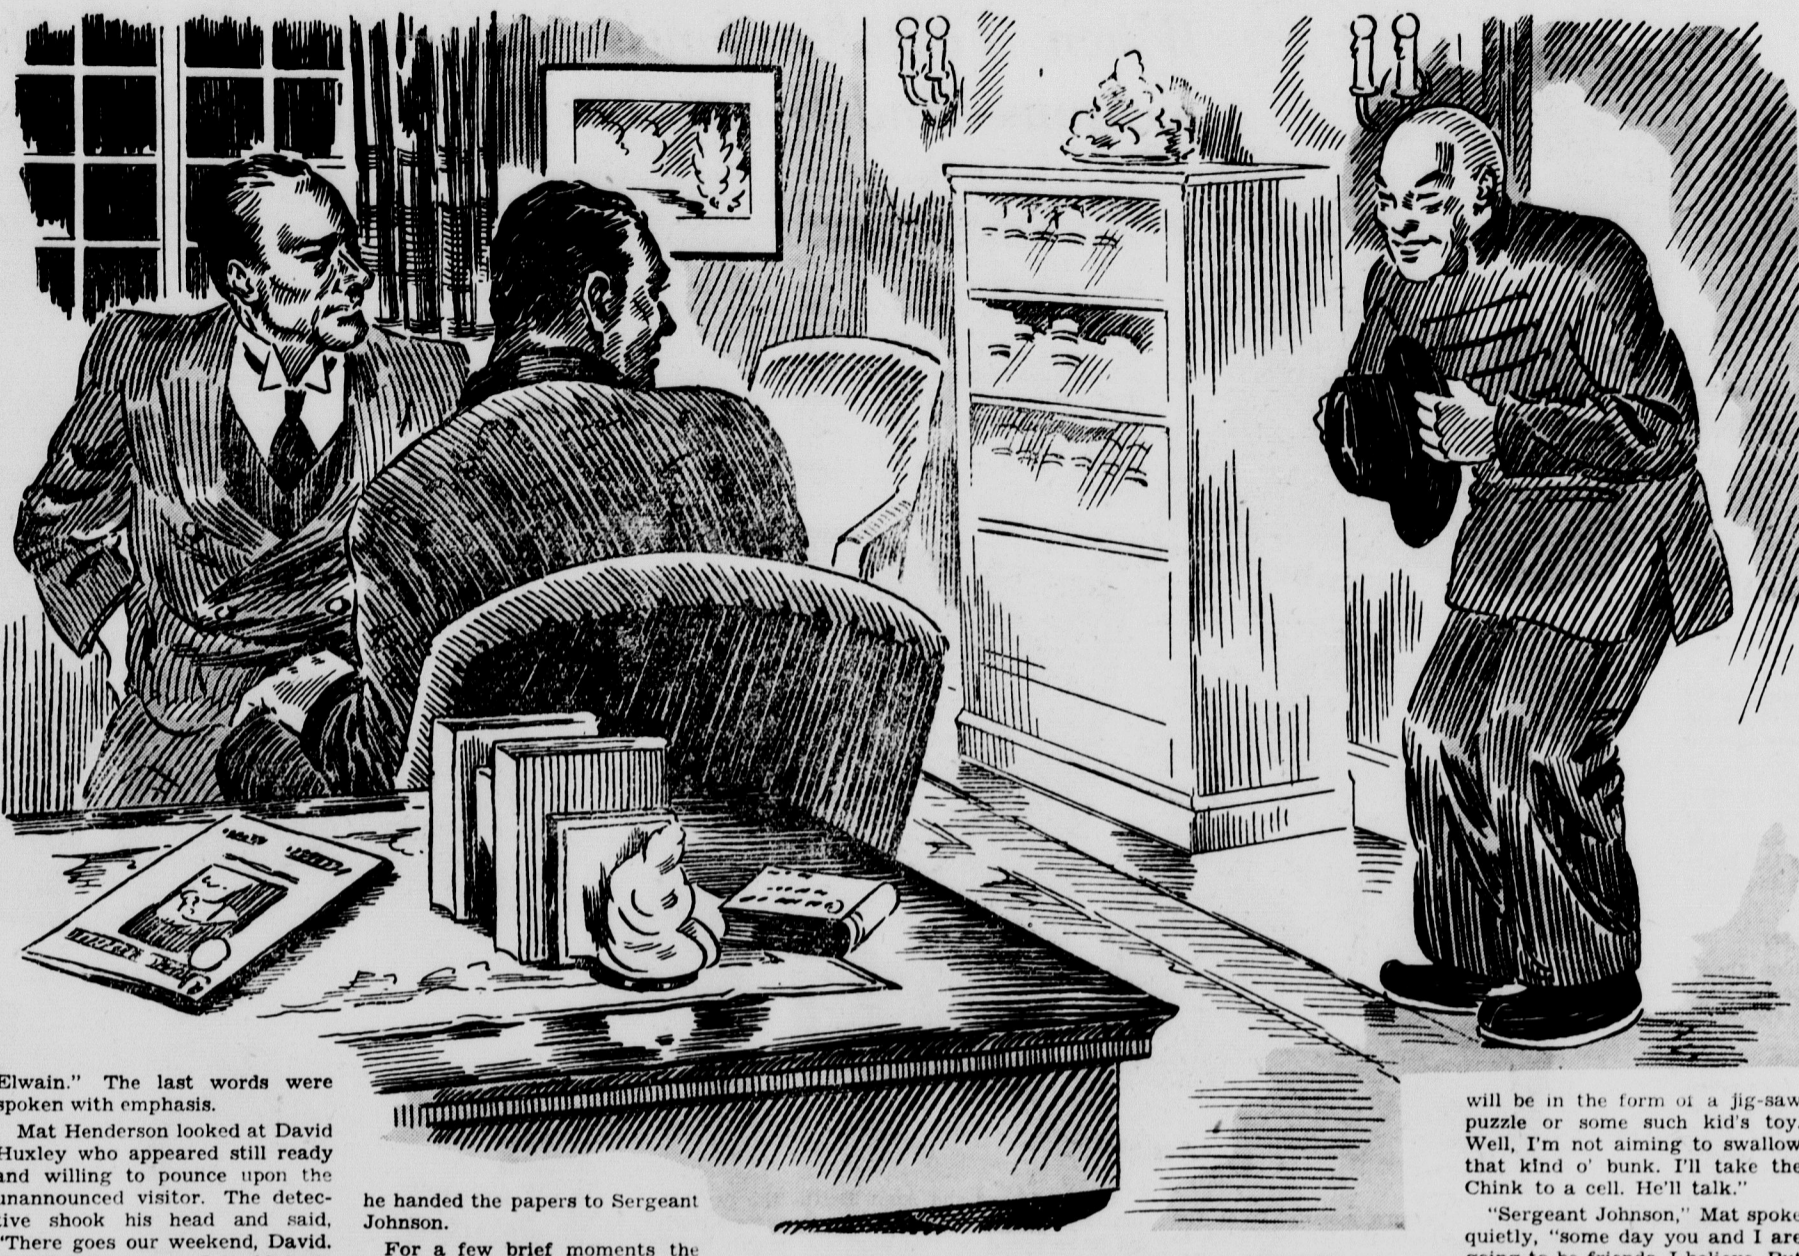

"Servants' entrance. I found penthouse door open. Velly sorry, honorable sir. Velly sorry. I am Chang Ling. Please observe, honorable gentlemen, I come uninvited."

"All right," the detective spoke, disturbed at the thought of his plans for a weekend of outdoor activity going awry.

"Velly sorry, honorable gentlemen. But the house of Ling needs great detective. My cousin, Lung Woo, is servant for honorable Mistei McElwain, president of American-Oriental Steamship Company. This afternoon honorable Mistei McElwain joined his honorable ancestors."

"What's that?" Mat shouted. "Bob McElwain? Dead? How did he die?"

"Most mysterious circumstances," the Oriental replied. "My cousin, Lung Woo, is at my house. He is afraid police will arrest him. So, after telephone call, he come to my house. He did not kill honorable Mistei Mc-

"The Two Men Jerked Around to Face the Doorway—"

Elwain." The last words were spoken with emphasis.

Mat Henderson looked at David Huxley who appeared still ready and willing to pounce upon the unannounced visitor. The detective shook his head and said, "There goes our weekend, David. And I felt so sure I could have won back the two dollars I lost to you at the beach resort last month. I just know I wouldn't have sliced a single drive."

"Yes, sir," the Englishman replied meekly. "To Chinatown, sir?"

"No, to McElwain's house on Pacific Avenue, before the police have a chance to turn the place topsy turvy. Chang Ling, we'll meet you at your place later. And keep an eye on your cousin. I shall want to talk to him."

A UNIFORMED POLICEMAN stood guard at the main entrance to the McElwain mansion. "Too late for a scoop," Mat Henderson muttered as he jumped lightly from the roadster, closely followed by David Huxley.

"You can't go in there," was the gruff order of the policeman.

"My dear man, you over-estimate my limitations," Mat responded, producing an attractive and very official looking badge. "The name is Henderson. And this gentleman is my assistant, Mr. Huxley."

Mat Henderson and the implacable Huxley turned their backs on the angry detective and entered the library where a police photographer was engaged in taking pictures of the body. He immediately walked to an open window which looked down into a patio in the rear of the building. Then he turned to an enormous glass showcase in which the murdered steamship magnate kept his famous collection of Oriental antiques.

"David," he spoke softly over his shoulder, "take some snapshots of this showcase, while I engage the department men in conversation. Be sure you get all the pieces into the picture."

IN THE DOORWAY he met Sergeant Johnson. "Was that window open when you arrived on the scene, sergeant?"

"Of course it was," came the bitter retort. "You don't think I'd be dumb enough to open it myself and cover up the fingerprints?"

"Certainly not," said Mat. "But now look here, Johnson. I know you don't like me and my methods. But can't you forget your grudge for a moment? I really have no interest in the case and if you solve the crime I'll not mention to a soul that I've helped you. That is, er—if you'll let me help you."

"You're too late, Mr. Henderson. It's an open and shut case. I know who did it."

"Congratulations. And who, may I ask, is the culprit?"

"The Chinese cook. He's gone."

Matthew Henderson strolled absent-mindedly to the safe. "Didn't the murderer forget something?" he asked the sergeant over his shoulder. Then he reached into the spacious wall safe and extracted a packet of papers and an envelope containing a substantial amount of currency. "If the motive was robbery," he added, "the criminal was rather clumsy. Besides the cash, there's about twenty thousand dollars in negotiable securities here. Look, sergeant." And he handed the papers to Sergeant Johnson.

For a few brief moments the policeman scanned the papers. And during those moments Mat Henderson stooped with incredible swiftness over the outstretched body of the shipping man and unobserved slipped a small object into his pocket. "Well, sergeant," he spoke nonchalantly, "let me know if I can be of any help to you."

"I WANT YOUR permission to make a thorough inspection of the McElwain house, Jim," Mat Henderson said as he and David Huxley were seated in the private office of Chief of Police James Morris at the Hall of Justice. "I have a hunch that we're going to find a few things which your thick-skulled Detective Sergeant Johnson has overlooked."

"He'll never forgive you if you do," Chief Morris said with a smile, knowing that the grudge between Johnson and his friend Henderson was largely imaginary. "And I'll never forgive myself if I don't," Mat replied. "Look here, Jim, I wish you'd call your men off the trail of Lung Woo."

"I will, if you say so, Mat. But the radio was going full blast

when the body was discovered in the library. Why, I ask you, David, why did Bob McElwain leave in the midst of his 'Trail of Thrills' to go to his library and open his safe? Surely not to take out this clever but worthless imitation of his one-eyed Buddha?"

"Imitation, sir?" David questioned. "Is that what you found clutched in Mr. McElwain's hand, sir?"

"Precisely. Wait, I've got it. David. Let us have another look at these wires." Moving the heavy cabinet away from the wall, Mat carefully examined the wires. "Huh, let me see. This is the antenna lead-in, this is the power wire and this is the ground. Hold on, what's this? Another wire? And this one runs out this way, to the window. David, you get out there, through the window, follow this brown wire and tell me where it leads to." One more look at the rear of the radio chassis convinced Mat that it was a special hook-up similar to that used in installing an extra microphone such as is often used at parties as a source of amusement. A few moments later, David Huxley rejoined him and reported that the brown wire led along the patio to the library through a neatly drilled hole in the wall.

With little difficulty the two men found that the mysterious wire led to a loudspeaker concealed behind an Oriental tapestry. The insulation had been removed in two spots, one outside the window and one inside a closet in the library which was used for storage of old books.

"So that's it," muttered the detective. "The old microphone trick. And they used it to scare Mac out of his wits. The rest, I believe, will be easy, David, my man. We'll stop at the radio studio on our way home and ask to see a copy of the script used on the day our friend died. Also, we'll have our friend Chang Ling get us a bit of detailed history on this miniature one-eyed Buddha. Then the pieces of the puzzle ought to fit pretty well together."

TWO DAYS LATER a group of men sat in the spacious office of the Chief of Police James Morris. Before the desk beside the chief sat Matthew Henderson, intently peering at a small heap of oddly shaped pieces of cardboard. Behind him stood the phlegmatic David Huxley. On the other side of the desk, nervously holding on to their chairs, sat Chang Ling, the venerable merchant of Chinatown, and his cousin, Lung Woo, the late Robert McElwain's cook. In front of the window, an insolent sneer on his face, stood Detective Sergeant Johnson, chewing on a cigar.

The latter spoke—"So the Chink finally decided to surrender, eh? Shall I write a confession from him or is he going to talk?"

"Easy, Sergeant," the chief admonished him. "Mr. Henderson is about to hand you the solution of the McElwain murder. No rough stuff please."

"And I suppose the solution will be in the form of a jig-saw puzzle or some such kid's toy. Well, I'm not aiming to swallow that kind of bunk. I'll take the Chink to a cell. He'll talk."

"Sergeant Johnson," Mat spoke quietly, "some day you and I are going to be friends, I believe. But right now I feel more like shoving that awful cigar down your throat. Are you going to listen or do you want to hang the wrong man?"

"All right," the detective said, grudgingly. "Shoot. I'm all ears."

"That's exactly what is wrong with you, old chap," David Huxley broke in. "All ears and no brains."

In an effort to avert further hostilities, Mat Henderson commenced—"The facts, briefly, are these, gentlemen. McElwain was an inveterate collector of rare Oriental relics. During one of his frequent trips to China he acquired the gem of them all, the famous miniature one-eyed Buddha, at a fabulous figure. He had a special wall safe built in which, in addition to some valuable papers and currency, he kept the little statue. You will recall that no fingerprints but McElwain's own were found on that safe. You will also recall that no trace of poison was found in the half-empty tea-cup."

"The autopsy," he continued, "clearly revealed that the man had died from poison. But no amount of chemical analysis could determine the nature of the poison."

As the famous detective spoke, piece after piece was fitted into a growing pattern of cardboard on the chief's desk.

"After carefully questioning Lung Woo, as well as the butler and the maid, we find that McElwain left his radio about mid-way in his favorite program. Something in that radio serial made him rush into the library before the program was over. What else could it have been but fear for the safety of his beloved one-eyed Buddha? And so he was found on the floor with his miniature clutched in his hand."

"What's that?" Sergeant Johnson exploded. "I didn't see anything in his hand."

"That is because I saw it first," Mat stated with a honeyed smile. "Other vital facts are these, gentlemen. They all fit into this rather queer pattern of Oriental design. Listen: The safe was found open, yet, apparently neither the cash nor the negotiable securities had been touched. Robbery, therefore, could not have been the motive, except—well—er—someone wanted that one-eyed Buddha more than anything. And that someone must have been a person who had been foiled in the attempt to acquire the antique by fair means. Lung Woo, and not the butler, always served his master's tea and called at 4:30 for the dishes. He knew at once that he would be suspected and sought safety in the house of Chang Ling. I brought him to my house to help me in this crazy puzzle together."

"Next, my assistant and I discovered an auxiliary set of wires leading to the library. There we also found a loudspeaker concealed behind a tapestry and further unmistakable evidence that someone, hiding in the library closet, had attached a microphone by means of which he had broken into the program. The rest was easy. We glanced over the script used for that particular broadcast. It dealt—believe it or not—with the mystery of the one-eyed it's pretty evident that he is the murderer. Or else, why would he run off like a scared rabbit?"

"Mat," he said slowly, "what do you know about Lung Woo? Where is he?"

"The last place where Johnson would think of looking for him—in my penthouse apartment," calmly retorted Mat.

Later the same morning, Mat Henderson was seated in the livingroom of the McElwain home. Idly staring at the radio console, he spoke to his friend, "There are still a few pieces missing in our jig-saw puzzle. David. For instance, we know that McElwain sat here, in this very chair, every afternoon at four listening to the radio. 'Trail of Thrills' was the only program he was known to listen to while having his accustomed afternoon tea. His tea-cup was half-filled when he left the room to go to the library. He always turned off the radio after his favorite program was over. Yet, the radio was going full blast when the body was discovered in the library. Why, I ask you, David, why did Bob McElwain leave in the midst of his 'Trail of Thrills' to go to his library and open his safe? Surely not to take out this clever but worthless imitation of his one-eyed Buddha?"

The rest was easy. We glanced over the script used for that particular broadcast. It dealt—believe it or not—with the mystery of the one-eyed

Strange Are The Mysteries Of Far East!

Buddha. The continuity department at the radio station informed us that the script had been purchased from none other than Yan Chu, the well-known dealer in Oriental antiques.

"But I still don't see," the scowling sergeant interrupted once more, "where that is leading us. Someone killed McElwain for his little statue, and yet the doggone thing was in his hand when he was found dead. If what you say is true, Henderson, we have a case of murder without robbery on our hands."

"Almost right, but not quite, Johnson," Mat said. "This is not a case of murder without robbery, but robbery without murder. You see, the Buddha I found clutched in his hand was a very good imitation of the original relic. The real one is—or rather was—in the possession of Yan Chu, who placed the duplicate in the dead man's hand in order to make his crime seemingly more perfect. Our friend, Chang Ling, recovered the priceless miniature through some clever Oriental subterfuge, coupled with a bit of sleight-of-hand and a healthy Chinese upercut."

A smile broke through the hitherto angry features of Sergeant Johnson. "I'll have to hand it to you, Henderson, for figuring things out. Guess I'd better go and pick up this guy Yan Chu on a murder charge. That'll complete your puzzle picture, won't it?"

Mat Henderson rose slowly, his eyes still riveted on the jig-saw puzzle before him. He pointed to the nearly completed pattern of a hideous statue from which some two or three pieces were still missing.

"Sergeant Johnson," he said, "you will find Yan Chu securely trussed in the rear of his shop, all ready for delivery into your capable hands. But I wouldn't advise you to charge him with murder."

"What are you trying to hand me now? Say, have you gone nuts? Why should Mac have swallowed poison with all the dough he had?"

"He didn't swallow it, my dear fellow. This is how he was poisoned. And he took a small silk-lined case from the hand of Chang Ling. He opened it and before the amazed eyes of Chief Morris and Sergeant Johnson lay a tiny statuette with a single, evilly gleaming eye."

"At approximately 4:15, Yan Chu broke into the mystery drama and from the library closet spoke into his microphone: 'The one-eyed Buddha has escaped. The miracle has happened. The one-eyed Buddha has walked through the walls of steel.' The old man became panicky, rushed into the library and opened his burglar-proof wall safe. That is exactly what Yan Chu had been waiting for. Not being versed in the art of safe-cracking, he had devised this method of making his hated rival collector open the safe himself."

"And here comes the end of this strange drama. If you observe this antique statuette closely, you will find a hidden spring which releases a poisoned needle. McElwain never knew of the existence of this fiendish device. He lifted the little statue from its case and clutched it so gingerly upon finding it safe that the hidden spring was released. Hence the tiny pin prick in the palm of the dead man's hand which you gentlemen of the police had so carelessly overlooked."

"It was a simple matter for Yan Chu to substitute the clever imitation for the original relic and to depart the way he had come—through the library window and across the low patio wall. And so you see, Sergeant Johnson, technically Yan Chu did not kill Robert McElwain although—indirectly—he most assuredly caused his death by means of the ingenious plot represented by this jig-saw puzzle."

He pointed at the puzzle picture once more. "You see, Sergeant, there is only one piece missing now. And the name of that piece is Yan Chu. Shall I go get him for you?"

"Like neck you will," the sergeant retorted hotly. "You ought to leave something in this case to me."

"This time you're right, Johnson," Mat Henderson replied. "And to show you that I harbor no ill feelings against you, I am going to make you a present of this puzzle. I prefer the more difficult ones."

"Thank you very much," Johnson said. "I'll take it home with me. I'll solve it in no time."

Orry-Kelly—Authority On Hollywood Fashions

Pace Of Future Popular Modes Set By Screen Star Styles

Great Designer Busy Creating New Models For Noted Actresses

HOLLYWOOD now holds the reins of fashion securely in her grasp. Slowly but surely, over a period of time, style creators have come to realize that women the world over have come to regard screen actresses as the arbiters of fashion.

As the first ladies of the screen dress, so dresses the world, for women in every land are quick to seize upon the fashions they see upon the screen and adapt them to their individual needs.

This style leadership places great responsibility in the hands of the people who must create gowns for the stars. It means that these lovely garments, even though the date of their inception is months before they are revealed via the celluloid, must represent the height of fashion at the time of the release of the picture.

In short, Hollywood fashions are created by people who have so sensitive a response to style that they can actually foresee, months ahead of time, what will be the accepted trend of the mode.

Foremost among the great style designers who give so liberally of their talent in Hollywood is Orry-Kelly who devotes his time exclusively to the creation of the exquisite garments worn by the beautiful women stars in pictures produced by Warner Bros. Glamorous Kay Francis, winsome Anita Louise and the fair-haired sprite Joan Blondell, all have their clothes designed by Orry-Kelly.

And just who is Orry-Kelly, and what do his fine ideas concerning women's fashions mean, not alone in connection with studio styles, but with the everyday clothes of the average woman?

Orry-Kelly, as you would suspect, is a dynamic person, with a brain as lightning fast as his deft sketching fingers. Sitting behind a drawing board in his comfortable studio-workshop atop one of the big administration buildings in the heart of the Warner Bros. myriad sound stages, Mr. Kelly gives the immediate impression of being a person of unusual ability.

His deep resonant voice utters clipped words of authority. He is a man who, by very reason of background and training, has learned to conserve his vast store of energy for creative undertakings, rather than dissipate his talents in minute consideration of small details. Yet his very work really constitutes the assembling of a mass of detailed style knowledge, which in turn, by the process of elimination, must be reduced to a fine minimum, so all in all the man is quite a paradox.

It is this man, through his almost psychic insight into style trends, who can foresee months ahead of time what fashions will win feminine acceptance.

Now it so happens that this master designer, even though he finds the majority of his working hours devoted to the creation of new and interesting clothes for the screen great, feels that his knowledge should also be available to the average woman. If you are interested in securing style forecasts prepared by Orry-Kelly write to the Forum. We will tell you how to obtain the attractive colored folder of studio styles that he has developed, along with special predictions as to the coming style trends.

He has also made other information available in his figure charts which should have equal appeal. These charts show how to select necklines, hem lengths, and other important details with direct consideration for individual figure proportions. They are simple and direct and of inestimable help in choosing various becoming adaptations of current fashions.

If the thought of being able to keep your personal wardrobe smartly styled according to the forecasts of Orry-Kelly interests you, simply drop us a line for full details.

Offer Recipes For Cooking Vegetables

Much Variety Offered When Different Ways Of Cookery Are Used

IT'S a trite but true observation that imagination is all-important in the performance of household tasks if they are to be lifted from the routine of deadening drudgery. Every home economist who has the interest of the home-making woman at heart stresses the value of a constantly fresh interest in the daily tasks that absorb so much of her time.

We will consider, for example, the question of that important ingredient of the daily menu—the vegetable. Regrettably as it is, many women simply follow a fixed routine in the matter of their selection and preparation. They pass by all new or unusual varieties because they are not sure of the family reaction to something out-of-the-way, and those they do bring home are prepared in the quickest and most ordinary manner, with very little thought given to preparing them in the most palatable and nutritious forms.

Advice as to cooking vegetables bristles with "don't's" as well as "do's".

Never use soda. While it does lighten color, it also destroys valuable vitamins.

Leafy vegetables should be cooked a short time only. Remove them from the fire when the leaves are tender.

Unfortunately space does not permit the printing of some of many delightful and unusual recipes we have discovered for the preparation of the common, everyday vegetables. However, if you'll address a request for them to the Five Star Weekly Forum, San Francisco, Calif., inclosing a three cent stamp, we'll be happy to send them right off to you.

Pre-School Children Require Well Balanced, Healthy Meals

Careful Menu Planning Necessary To Insure Child's Development

EATING, sleeping and play—these are the all-important elements in the development of the child of pre-school age. Simple as they are, they must be handled with intelligence and care if toddlers are to grow into strong and happy men and women.

Sleep must be long and unbroken with strict attention to a routine time for going to bed and rising. Play must be happy and constructive with a maximum of fresh air and sunshine.

Eating is the greatest problem of all, for it is absolutely necessary for small children to have a balanced diet containing the proper amount of calories, vitamins and minerals if a foundation of future well-being is to be laid.

For breakfast they may have any fresh ripe fruit stewed, excepting melons. Then a hot cereal, or, if they are over four, occasionally an uncooked one such as shredded wheat, cornflakes or puffed wheat. They may have their choice of bacon, or egg or both if their appetites are large. Toast with jam or honey and a glass of milk finishes their breakfast.

The youngsters' main meal comes in the middle of the day and starts with a cup of soup or broth. Then follows any green vegetable excepting corn, cucumbers, radishes, raw cabbage or eggplant. Also, potatoes (varied occasionally by rice or spaghetti) and meat. Meat offers a wide choice. Liver should be served once a week, then there's beef, lamb, fowl, or lean white fish. Never must meat be fried for children of pre-school age. Broiling is best. Dessert, the goal to be aimed at through the duller reaches of the meal can be any simple pudding with ice cream once in a while as a treat. Milk, of course, is the beverage.

Supper is the simplest meal of all and includes a choice of cereal, milk toast or cream soup. Then fruit or a simple dessert, and once in a while plain cake without icing. Bread and butter, or toast, a glass of milk, and so to bed.

The child of capricious appetite presents a special problem which must be handled with the utmost care. Never must he realize that his lack of interest in his meals is the cause of any worry, for every small child craves the limelight of family attention and will go to greater and greater lengths to gain it once he is aware that it exists.

The wisest plan is to set before the child as palatable a meal as possible, then give him about half an hour for his consumption, always, always withholding dessert until every vestige of vegetables and meat is gone. If he shows no interest in eating, or only plays about with it, all food should be removed at the end of the half hour period with the comment that no nourishment will be forthcoming until time for the next meal.

Exotic Make-up For Outdoors

THERE'S always something in make-up, for fashions in facial adornment follow closely the trend of style. In fact there must be close harmony between the face and the costume if a charming effect is to be achieved. Last year's style of make-up with this year's frock is just as incongruous as a feather boa with a tailored suit.

For this reason it behooves the woman whose aim it is to keep abreast the styles to be constantly alert for the newest developments in make-up creation and to put into practice any that will enhance her charm.

One of the newest sensations in the realm of cosmetic art is a revolutionary make-up which is as intriguing as it is delightful. It is a lustrous make-up designed for wear with sport clothes and it has innumerable practical advantages aside from the main one of giving the wearer an unmistakable air of youth and buoyant health.

The use of this new lustrous make-up simplifies one's beautifying problems to a marked degree, for after it has been applied at home it isn't even necessary to carry a powder puff to renew it, for it stays intact for hours at a time. The powder puff can be dispensed with altogether, as a matter of fact, for lustrous make-up comes in a thin, fluid cream which is applied with the finger tips. It gives the face a satiny, gleaming appearance and is positively the last word in cosmetic style.

At last the problem of how to keep one's face looking trim for sun bathing and swimming has been solved, for this lustrous make-up is waterproof and its outdoorish appearance harmonizes beautifully with beach togs. There's such a comforting feeling in the knowledge that one can emerge from the swimming pool with one's make-up still intact and without the necessity for hurriedly resorting to a beauty kit before one can face the world with aplomb.

Now that femininity has come into its own again, sun-tan is no longer high fashion the clock around. True it is charming and necessary with sport clothing, but our new evening clothes with their delicate, womanly style call for a lighter, more evanescent make-up. This presents a problem, for sun-tan is a pretty permanent proposition and takes much longer to lose than it does to acquire. The answer is to pre-women of delicate coloring; mauve, a dark tan designed for the brunette type, and riviera, a deep sun-tan for those who like to give the impression of a recent trip to the tropics.

The iridescence and radiant sheen which this new make-up imparts to the countenance takes years off one's appearance, for it emulates the glowing healthfulness of youthful skin. Its burnished patina also suggests hours and hours spent in the sun and air, so that the woman who must spend much of her time indoors can, with the aid of lustrous sun-tan make-up, emerge from home and give the impression that she has soaked up simply hours of sun.

Also, all of the discomfort of sun bathing is done away with, and everyone who has spent too much time under the burning rays of summer's sun knows just how painful this can be. In fact, many women in seeking a fine, outdoor tan have done grave damage to their skin through over-exposing it to the actinic rays of the sun. If one's skin is at all delicate it is unwise to seek even a slight tan, for the burning that may ensue is extremely painful and permanent harm may be done.

Healthful as well as beautifying advantages are gained by the woman who uses this new lustrous make-up, for in it are embodied rich, natural oils which nourish and beautify the skin after its application and all during the time it is on the face. At the same time it prevents sunburn and aids in acquiring an even tan.

It's always fun to try out something new and different, for in this way it is often possible to bring out new charm in one's features. Also, it is wise psychologically, for quite frequently something unusual is stimulating and helps to improve the personality. Lustrous make-up is decidedly new and consequently will give to the wearer a feeling of being quite up-to-the-minute.

serve one's delicate pink and white skin for more formal afternoon and evening occasions, and to use cosmetics which will give a sun-tan effect for sports wear. Lustrous make-up is the answer to a style-conscious maiden's prayer, for it comes in the beautiful sun-tan shades and gives the desired effect for day time, and when it is removed, there's one's natural, creamy skin to harmonize with evening frocks.

These three shades will complement any coloring, for they are beige, which is a light tan for

Clean Furniture With Soapsuds

IT'S too bad that so many simple household time and labor savers are so little known. For instance, the best and quickest way of cleaning prized mahogany and walnut furniture is with good old soap and water. Simply wring your cloth out of mild, thick soapsuds and cleanse the surface well. To follow up, wipe carefully with a mixture consisting of one quart of hot water, one tablespoon of turpentine and three tablespoons of lemon oil, and rub with a cloth.

Averages 100 Miles an Hour But Holds Safety Record!

Chet Gardner Wasn't Good Enough To Drive A Horse

By Richard W. Emery

CHESTER LEROY Gardner—"Chet"—Gardner now to a million automobile racing fans—wasn't good enough to be a horse driver. That's why he gave up the reins, threw away the whip, climbed from an old creaking horse-drawn truck in 1918 and swore by the bolts in Montana that he would become an automobile mechanic.

He wasn't good enough to be a horse driver because he had hurt his back while he had been trying to unload a hayrick. A nice, quiet, peaceful job was what he needed, the doctors said. So he got a job driving those fine, big, windy pleasure cars of 1918, and between chauffeurings he learned about gasoline motors.

That's how it is that he holds a unique position in present automobile racing. In a sport where the custom is for one man to own a car, a second man to keep its mechanism working, and still a third to drive it in races, Chet Gardner is a one-man racing outfit. Owner, mechanic and driver—he's all three. He is a close personal friend of every bolt, bar, brace and cotter-key in the machines he drives.

Because he knows what his car is made of and knows how it works and how to make it go, he has a high average of finishes. In the language of the grimy gentlemen who toil in the pit, Chet can "keep a car together" until a race is over—given fair luck and half a chance.

He kept his car together long enough in 1933 to set the world's 150-mile dirt track record. He "kept together" for those 150 miles at an average speed of ninety-one miles an hour, while half of the eighteen cars that had started were sputtering into the pit.

Chet Gardner holds a few records, but he's not satisfied. A few weeks ago at his Winter quarters he was delving into the mysterious gasoline digestive system of his $6000 two-seater. Down in the sooty interior, he said, he thought he might find an extra mile or two an hour, to be brought out in 1937's speedway classics. Half-hidden in the motor, he offered a few pointers on the general mechanism of a racing car.

"Now just take a connecting rod," Chet said, through a cylinder.

"An ordinary car has a rod that able to stop a car than it is to be able to start it," he grumbled. "Valves in this engine are operated by overhead cam shafts. There are four valves per cylinder—two intake and two exhaust. There are two carburetors, one for each two cylinders.

"Now you take a racing car," continued Chet from his gloomy sanctuary, "and you'll find that it has ten times as much space between pistons and cylinder walls as a passenger car motor has. That's because of the heat at high speed. The expansion from heat would make the motor freeze—make the pistons stick in the cylinders—if there weren't plenty of room."

"A racing car, of course, has no fan. It can't have; the motor goes too fast. You take an airplane propeller; it turns only 1800 revolutions or so. If it turns much faster, it won't pull air. It gets in its own way. So we leave off the fan. A racing motor turns over two and a half times as fast as an airplane motor, you see. And she's all pressure lubricated except the wrist pins. And she has a magneto ignition instead of a battery."

Gardner was born on a farm near Ridgeway, Missouri. When he was 9 his family moved to Colorado, where he eventually learned that he was not good enough, as it were, to be a horse driver. His brother, Ray, four years older, used to race at the county fairs at Hugo, Colorado, and Chet rode with him as a mechanic.

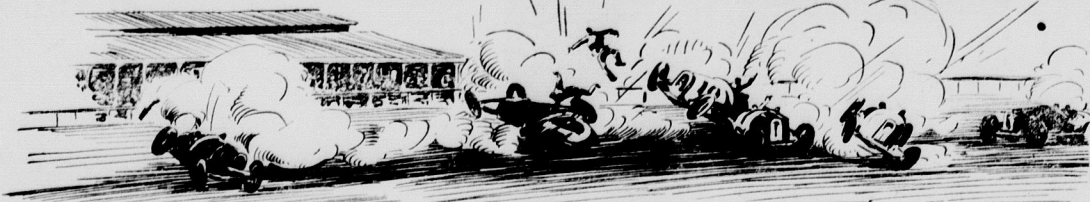

"Actually it wasn't so much as a mechanic as it was something to keep Ray from being thrown out by centrifugal force on the curves," the one-time little brother recalls.

Then there came a glorious day in 1923 when Chet was able to buy his own racer. He entered it proudly in his first race, at Brighton, Colorado. The first race of the day was an open contest around a half-mile oval. In the first race he won third prize. The track after track through the East, Gardner strove for wins in his first Eastern tour. He drove on the board track at Atlantic City.

At Toledo, Ohio, a big crowd saw Gardner win a hard-fought 100 mile race. His car averaged 75 miles per hour.

It was in that period that Chet Gardner took his fastest ride. Curiously, in the fastest race he ever drove, the winner of many races placed only fourth. It was a 100 mile race, and his average speed for the 100 miles was 127.6 miles per hour.

Ray Keach was the winner that

No one who saw that race will ever forget how the car driven by Keach rocketed down the track into the guard rail. When his car spun in a sickening curve, nearly every other car on the track piled into it. Keach was killed. Gardner had been in the race but had dropped into the pit because of motor trouble. His car was in the pit when the crash came.

Racing has taken Chet Gardner into 41 of the 48 States. He has miles at Indianapolis, traveling above 100 miles per hour, without relief. In the list of members are the greatest names in modern American racing.

Gardner makes annual barnstorming tours, towing his single-seater on a trailer pulled by his sedan. His annual highway mileage is around 40,000 miles. He has driven 261,000 miles on the highway since 1929—without accident.

Even in French Pastry

FLOUR WITH THIS FLAG-ON-THE-BAG

Can't Cause a Baking Failure

Use Drifted Snow "Home-Perfected" Flour and Martha Meade's recipes for Six New French Pastries (packed in each sack) and you'll turn out pastries fit for a king!

These French Pastries are just the thing for special occasions—and Drifted Snow "Home-Perfected" Flour which can't cause a failure, turns out pastries you'll be proud to serve.

That's because Martha Meade's recipes and Drifted Snow Flour are both pre-tested under kitchen conditions just like your own. Sperry has a staff of 117 Western homemakers living in many different cities and towns to do this testing under all climatic conditions. They try Martha Meade's recipes to make sure any woman can use them. They bake with Drifted Snow Flour to make certain it always gives uniform results—never varies in quality.

The commonest fault in most flours, and the chief cause of all baking failures, is variation in flour quality. This danger to your baking is banished by the work of Sperry's staff of homemakers. Only flour which they find gives perfect results under all conditions is allowed to be sold as Drifted Snow "Home-Perfected" Flour.

Although Drifted Snow "Home-Perfected" Flour protects you from the biggest cause of poor baking, it is only a small portion of the cost of each recipe. Only 4% of the cost of these French Pastries is represented by Drifted Snow Flour—don't risk expensive ingredients by using untested flour!

Because it's so important to use this flour which can't cause a baking failure, Sperry now puts a flag on each sack—easy to see, easy to identify. Inside every sack is Martha Meade's "Six-Of-A-Kind" cook book, 36 recipes in all, including the Six New French Pastries. With these recipes and Drifted Snow "Home-Perfected" Flour, you'll turn out pastries fit for a king—good enough for your own family! Look for the flag-on-the-bag!

is just a piece of junk compared to one in a racer. Rods for this engine cost $65 apiece. They're made out of tubular steel—hollow. A tube is stronger than a solid bar the same size.

"People don't think of the strain on a connecting rod. But look here!" The owner-mechanic-driver thrust a greased forehead up into the outer world. He waved a monkey wrench.

"That rod has to start and stop the piston twice for every stroke. Once at each end of the cylinder, see? All right. Now a racing engine is a lot higher speed engine than an airplane motor. It turns up as high as 5500 revolutions per minute. A passenger car won't turn up more than 3600, at the very top.

"Roughly, that's ninety revolutions a second in a racing engine at top speed. The connecting rod has to start and stop the piston 180 times a second—and still hang together!

"And realize that the piston makes a complete stop at each end of the stroke—a complete stop and change of direction 180 times a second!"

Chet is very proud of the big new brakes he recently put on his two-seater, and while he explored the motor he said that passenger automobile drivers who don't keep their brakes in the best possible condition should be kept in a squirrel cage.

"It's a lot more important to be second match of the day was for stock cars only.

Chet entered his racer. It was a regular stock car except for light-weight pistons that he had installed. The cars lined up, started, roared around the oval—and Chet Gardner had won his first race. He finished first. His speed was 60 miles an hour, a high speed for that early year.

His victory made him thirst for new conquest. While he worked in a garage in Denver he built a racing car of a Model T Ford, with a Raja head but otherwise just plain Model T, the automobile which has become a part of American folklore.

"That car would do 100 miles an hour," its driver remembers. "The first race I put it in was at Longman, Colorado, and I got a second place. I raced it in 1926 and 1927. I was leading in the 1926 Colorado championship until I left the State. In the fall of '26 and in '27 I drove the Raja Ford in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

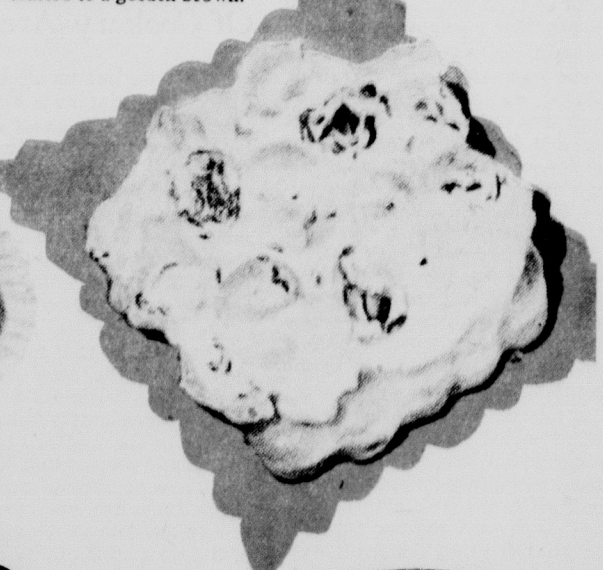

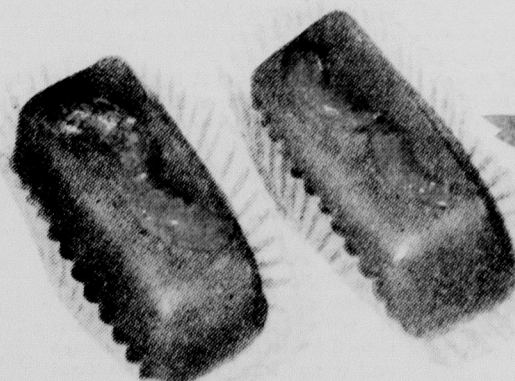

An owner of racing cars, Clarence Tarbet, heard of a driver who was beating the Tarbet pilots regularly, and he sent for Gardner. In the Spring of 1928, driving a 122-cubic inch Miller straight eight, Chet Gardner made his first tour of the East. His first race in the car for Tarbet, however, was at the Ascot Speedway at Los Angeles, now condemned. He finished "along about third."

FRIDAY IS DEADLINE FOR BIDS ON P. O. BRANCH CONTRACT

POSTMASTER TO FORWARD OFFERS

Grand Central Market Agreement Expires On June 30

Tomorrow is the last day bids will be accepted at the post office for the contract substitution.

Postmaster Frank R. Harwood warned persons interested in securing the contract station that tomorrow is the deadline, and that after that day no bids can be accepted.

Local business houses interested in bidding for the contract postal station can secure full information from Postmaster Harwood at the post office.

Expires June 30

Two years ago plenty of merchants wanted the contract station, feeling it would bring a tremendous number of people to their stores.

The Grand Central market contract will expire June 30. The new contract will run for two years.

Harwood must submit the bids to the government by May 15.

Regarding labor, requirements for handling business of the contract station are that the successful bidder must furnish one clerk for eight hours a day and one clerk for six hours a day, making a total of 14 hours of work daily.

The station also must furnish a burglar proof safe, a stamp cabinet, a counter shelf with windows built in and about 200 square feet of floor space.

Harwood has recommended to the government that the contract station be made an official substation of the Santa Ana post office, but no action has been taken on this proposal.

Friday Deadline In Farm Program

Tomorrow has been set as the final date for filing agricultural conservation work sheets in 1937, according to W. M. Cory, assistant farm advisor.

Growers who have not yet done so are requested to call at the office, 302 courthouse annex, where assistance will be given in filling out the form, he said.

The work sheet, as it is called, is the form on which all the basic data relative to the farm land owned or operated in 1937 is shown.

Land owners or operators should therefore bring with them a legal description of all the farm land owned or operated by them in 1937, the acreage devoted to different crops in 1936, the normal yield of the principal crop and the acreage of non-crop land such as that devoted to road, buildings, corrals, etc.

In the farm survey which was made in March, the land owners or operators were not contacted in every instance. Those who were not personally contacted are requested to call at the office to check the data relative to their place to verify its accuracy.

HOLC Starts Two Foreclosure Suits

Home Owners Loan corporation, government lending agency, has started two more suits here to foreclose mortgages on Orange county homes.

One suit sought to foreclose on Santa Ana property owned by A. R. Kelley and mortgaged for $2317.61. The other sought to foreclose a $600 mortgage against Sestenes Marquez, property near Anaheim.

Coronation Curiosities

By HAROLD S. CORBIN

One of a series of 18 articles explaining some of the novel phases in the crowning of King George VI of England on May 12, and citing historical precedents for them.

NO STRIKING HORSE

London is ready for 2,000,000 visitors to the coronation from all over the world. The streets of the ancient city will be thronged as perhaps never before in all its long history. Because the city is so old, many of the streets over which the coronation parade passes will be much narrower than the broad way of the Mall, which stretches from Buckingham palace toward Whitehall.

London has always experienced traffic troubles on coronation day. When Charles II came to the throne, in 1660, a proclamation was issued "for the better regulating his Majesty's Royal Procession from the Tower of London to his palace at Whitehall the 22nd day of April next, being the day before his Majesty's Coronation."

Apparently everybody wanted to be close to the king, and the Tower of London was in danger of bulging to collapse if that was permitted. So out of "his Majesty's care for preventing of all disorder" it was expressly stated that "no person whatever but the nobility, privy councillors, the gentlemen of their horse and their servants; liverymen presume to come into the tower that day, nor to bring in any horses, but those belonging to his Majesty and to his highness the Duke of York, and to the nobility and councillors."

All others were to stay outside on Tower hill. Whoever took part in the procession was to be at his post by "eight of the clock," although there was an exception.

His Majesty's special escort, the Duke of York's horse guards, serving in the van of the procession, was to be drawn up "early in the morning" at Crutche's.

For further prevention of disorder it was proclaimed "that no person whatsoever do that day ride upon any unruly or striking horse."

Local Ordinance On Zoning Popular

Orange county's zoning ordinance has gained fame far from home, supervisors learned Tuesday.

Officials of Thurston county, Washington, wrote from Olympia, stating that they had heard the ordinance worked well here and was considered a model. They asked for a copy.

Jules Markel, secretary of the Orange county planning commission, said at least five communities in Orange county are preparing to zone under provisions of the ordinance.

Garden Grove, which seeks to bar hog ranches and establish business, residential and other districts, will have a public hearing May 4.

Four Girls Lead In Legion Contest

Louise Bennett, Lola Mae Harmon, Betty Love and Ruth Hoover were in the running today for an airplane trip to Las Vegas and Boulder dam, first prize in the American Legion's popularity contest.

The contest is being conducted in connection with the Legion's benefit dance next month. The contest closes May 22. Registrations are taken at any American Legion post, or the Santa Ana American Legion hall, 313 North Birch street.

FOOD BUYING TRENDS ARE OUTLINED

Survey Shows Greatest Variance Is in Kind That Is Used

Americans have been eating about the same quantity of food for the past 10 years, notwithstanding the great reduction in incomes between 1931 and 1935, according to a report of the bureau of home economics just received by the agricultural extension service.

But after an analysis of dietary records kept by different types of families, Miss Frances Liles, Orange county home demonstration agent, said today the kinds of food eaten by families at different income levels are very different. Some have had a liberal diet. Others have had to do with very little of the important protective foods. The average diets of families spending $100 or more per person per year for food afforded some margin of safety in all nutritive essentials.

All Types Studied

The families studied reported on the kind, quantity and cost of food consumed. They included those of business and professional workers, wage-earners, and low-income, semi-dependent families. The dietary records collected at intervals since 1914 were taken in every season of the year, in cities and villages, in 44 states and the District of Columbia, and represented yearly expenditures for food from $32 to $200 per person (spring 1935 price level).

Greater expenditures for food per person are not evenly distributed over all commodities, says the report. A greater proportion is likely to go for eggs, meats, milk, butter, and the succulent vegetables and fruits than for grain products collected at intervals.

The groups spending the most for food not only have more food, but food rich in high quality proteins, in minerals, and in vitamins. Some waste is evident with increasing expenditures for food and a tendency to purchase more expensive forms of food; more butter, and a higher percentage of fluid, rather than canned milk.

Brown Will Filed For Probate

Vernon Perry Brown of Fullerton today filed the will of his late mother, Mrs. Laura Rachel Brown, for probate in the superior court here.

Mrs. Brown died April 20 in Monrovia, leaving her entire estate, valued at more than $10,000, to her son.

Marks has also filed a suit for annulment of her marriage.

NYA PROJECT IS TURNING OUT TOYS

Will Be Distributed Through New Local Library Plan

Shiny new and renewed toys started to emerge from the old high school print shop building today.

Thirty-three young men and women, on a new National Youth administration project, now are engaged in turning out new dolls and repairing other types of toys of every description, for use in the Santa Ana toy loan library.

Paying her first visit to Orange county, Mrs. Ann Treadwell, state director of the NYA, inspected the new project yesterday, in company with Orange county and Southern California NYA officials. Mrs. Treadwell also visited other NYA projects, and complimented the Orange county administration on the fine type of projects and excellent work being done here.

Others in the party of NYA officials included Arthur Yale, Southern California field representative; Ralph Kious, San Diego and Orange county district supervisor, and Robert Wilson, Orange county NYA supervisor.

Toys made and repaired at the new project quarters are for the toy loan library in Santa Ana, located at 220 West Third street.

20-30 Club Will Give Dance Here

Santa Ana 20-30 club today was inviting other 20-30 clubs of the county to attend a dance planned for May 13 in the Rendezvous ballroom, Balboa.

The club will have the ballroom exclusively for the evening, it was announced.

Motion pictures showing the development, construction and use of automobiles were shown to the Santa Ana club Tuesday night at its regular weekly meeting at Daniger's cafe.

Expect Ideal Weather For S. A. Day At Gardens

Prospects of ideal weather for the annual Santa Ana day event at the Rancho Santa Ana Botanic Garden Saturday were evident today.

Santa Anans who plan to visit the famous garden on the special day for them Saturday should secure cards from the chamber of commerce office in the courthouse annex.

Picnic Facilities

A schedule of activities for the day suggested that visitors assemble at the Orange County Plant Sanctuary to see the annual wild flower field nursery and cut wild flower display at the propagation nursery.

From noon until 1 p. m. will be the lunch hour. At the sanctuary restrooms, picnic tables and grills are provided for visitors.

Suggestions for the afternoon include a visit to the wild flower exhibit, a drive up to the herbary, cactus and succulent garden, exhibits and hikes. A talk on "Selected Native Plants for Your Garden" will be given by a staff member at 2:30 p. m.

Guides on Hand

Opportunity to ask questions on native flora will be given after the talk.

Those who arrive too late for the early part of the schedule may visit the garden and cut wild flower exhibits. Guides will be on hand in the plant sanctuary, where about five acres of land has been set aside for the raising of plants native to Orange county.

Due to abundant rains, the garden and wild flower fields are said to present the most beautiful sight in many years.

STIFF FIGHT LOOMS OVER ESTATE

$35,000 Property Is Subject of Court Action Here

George Hansen, Anaheim, today paved the way for a stiff battle with a brother and sister of his late wife over the latter's estate, valued at $35,923.75. Recently he was removed as administrator of the estate.

He laid claim to practically all the inventoried items of the estate, including three bank accounts in the name of his wife, Martha Hansen, in a quiet title action filed on his behalf by A. M. Bradley, of the law firm of Forgy, Reinhaus & Forgy, Santa Ana.

Two Ranches

Hansen's complaint alleges that Edward H. Marsen, now administrator of the estate, asserts an interest in the property on behalf of the estate. He asked the court to declare him sole owner.

The property involved includes two ranch properties near Anaheim, 10 lots in Los Angeles, a $777.18 bank account in Los Angeles, a $891.96 bank account in Anaheim, and an account of 4978 Kronen, or $1219.61, in Bergen, Norway.

Small Residue

If Hansen's claims are upheld by the court, there will be little or nothing left for Nils K. Moberg and Anna Moberg, the brother and sister, who are residual heirs under Mrs. Hansen's will.

The will was drawn before Mrs. Hansen's marriage to Hansen, and during a period when she was preparing to divorce James Rensler.

Anaheim Man on Oil Firm Board

John H. Weaver, Anaheim; A. L. Ribelin, Long Beach, and J. E. Pooler, Torrance, were named as directors in articles of incorporation of the W. F. E. Oil company, filed with the county clerk here today.

Principal offices of the company will be in Orange county, according to the articles, which provide for 300 shares of stock of no par value.

May Bride Is Feted at Turquoise and Yellow Pottery Shower Last Night

Miss Berkner Is Honored At Party

Mrs. A. Carstensen, Mrs. W. Barnett, Are Hostesses

Miss Marjorie Berkner, popular bride-elect of Lefter Holmes of Los Angeles, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Berkner of 2341 Riverside drive, was honored last night at an elaborate pre-nuptial shower given by her sister, Mrs. Allan Carstensen, and Mrs. Woodrow Barnett (Hawthorne Hunter), in the home of the former, 614 South Parton street.

The wedding is to occur May 23, and has been the incentive for many charming affairs which were climaxed by that of last night. The hostesses carried out a dainty pink and white color scheme in all their appointments, with bowls of Cecil Bruner roses, delicate white blossoms, and fern in the living room, and used the same dainty flowers in crystal bubble bowls on tiny mirror plaques when refreshments were served at a later hour. Pink and white place cards and tallies completed the spring-like motif.

A complete set of lovely turquoise and yellow pottery for Miss Berkner's trousseau was presented her by the group of friends to conclude the evening. Miss Adams of Fullerton won high score prize, Miss Mary Jean Du Bois won second, and the pretty little bubble bowl centerpieces were awarded high scores at each of the six tables in play.

Guests of Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Carstensen who participated in the shower courtesy were Miss Florence Turner, Miss Mary Jean Du Bois, Mrs. Clyde Higgins, Mrs. Carleton Smith, Miss Helen Demetrio, Miss Dorothy Dunbar, Miss Betty Seely, Mrs. Lee Hasenjaeger, Mrs. Paul Reynolds, Mrs. Bob Edwards, Mrs. Sam Adams, Miss Gertrude Link, Miss Beulah Davis, Miss Elizabeth Miller, Miss Dorothy Rose Young of Orange, Miss Thelma Hicks of Santa Ana, Mrs. Turner, Miss Virginia Graves, Mrs. Terry Stephenson Jr., Mrs. Fayette Birchler of Anaheim, Mrs. George Berenson of Los Angeles, Miss Marie La Brucherie, Mrs. Gene Anderson, Mrs. Jimmy Inch of Whittier, Miss Alma McLain, and Miss Fern Berkner, another sister of the honoree.

DINNER DANCE SPRING EVENT FOR 12 COUPLES

Twenty-four members of the younger set enjoyed a dinner dance Saturday night in the Green Cat ballroom when students of Miss Mary Morton, dancing teacher, held their spring formal in a pretty setting of candlelight and flowers.

The table appointments were all in yellow and white, in pretty springtime motif, and between courses of the dinner the young people danced to music of Janet Martin's orchestra.

A floor show also added to the fun, Bruce Buell entertaining with songs, and Lorie Buell with Spanish, Scotch and American dances, both accompanied by their mother, Tap dances by Carolyn Wells and by Teletia Dahl completed the program.

Patrons and patronesses for the dance were Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Gullidge, and Mrs. Harry Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Menzie, Mrs. W. E. Wall, Mrs. Porter Luthier, Mrs. Carolyn Wells, Mrs. Pearl Watson, Mrs. R. Rosset, Mrs. Roland Langenbeck, and Mrs. Thomas Alvord.

MEXICO FORMS INSPIRATION FOR LUNCHEON

Tamales, chili con carne, huevos cocidos en arroz, ensalada estilo sombrero, cafe, pan y mantequilla, and tortas made up the unique menu served by Mrs. J. E. Braden to her guests Tuesday when she presided at a truly Mexican luncheon in her home.

Appointing her table with a red and white check cloth and centerpiece of cactus, she marked the eight places with little cards telling the Mexican and American names of the dishes she was serving.

After luncheon, the guests, who had been asked to come prepared to talk about Mexico, discussed the legends, customs and culture of that country.

Guests included the Mesdames Lewis Williams, Theo Faulkner, W. S. Buchanan, A. W. Gerrard and George Gould of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Frank Pierce and Mrs. Albert Raymond of Anaheim.

Germany Trip Incentive Of Party

Bon voyage was the keynote of a charming farewell party given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. John J. Jacobi in her home at 2046 South Van Ness street to honor Mrs. Henry Schmidt before her departure tomorrow for a visit in Germany.

Friends of Mrs. Schmidt were invited for an afternoon of bridge and five hundred, and tallying of scores at the close gave high and low prizes in bridge to Mrs. Schmidt and Mrs. E. L. Redford, and in the other game to Mrs. Anton Borchard, high, and Mrs. Anton Osterkamp, low.

Red poppies formed centerpiece of the small tables at which refreshments were served at the close. During the hour of chat after the dessert course, a shower of gift handkerchiefs brought by the guests was presented to Mrs. Schmidt to take with her on her trip.

Invited with Mrs. Schmidt to share in Mrs. Jacobi's hospitality were the Mesdames E. L. Redford, Roland Langenbeck, Charles Hilleheim, James Colombini, Charles Borchard, Anton Borchard, Gus Callens, Joe Callens, Anton Osterkamp and Mary Croft. Mrs. Schmidt and Mrs. Jacobi are leaving tomorrow night by train for Los Angeles and will sail May 5 for Germany. Mr. Schmidt's former home. They plan to visit Mr. Schmidt's sisters in the Rhine country and then go down the Rhine to Bavaria and over to Basle, Switzerland, Leipzig, Saxony, and Berlin, returning home in August. They are sailing on the Bremen and will come home on the S. S. Europa.

BRIDGE CLUB AT HORNADAY HOME

Mrs. R. G. Hornaday was hostess to her bridge club Tuesday evening at her home, 2055 South Broadway. Her neighbors had sent in many lovely flowers to decorate the pleasant living-room where auction bridge was played for the evening, and Mrs. Bud Drain won consolation prize. After the game had been completed, guests were ushered to a prettily decorated dining-room where they were served a salad course.

Mrs. Maxine Yorton joined them at this time, and other guests of Mrs. Hornaday were Mrs. Glenn Gates, Mrs. Edward Salah, Mrs. Clyde McWhorter, Mrs. Edith Monroe, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Bud Drain, and Miss Ruth Beamer.

Birthday Is Marked by Surprise

Her seventy-seventh birthday anniversary was the occasion for a happy surprise for Mrs. Alice Wade last night when her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swanberger, entertained at a party for her in their home at 1137 South Van Ness street, carrying out a pink and white motif in flowers and all appointments.

Children and grandchildren and one great grandchild, as well as several friends of Mrs. Wade, assembled for the jolly surprise between the hours of 7:30 and 9:30, reminiscing with the honor guest and enjoying a pleasant family reunion.

At the end of the evening, the hostess served dainty refreshments, including three birthday cakes which had been presented to Mrs. Wade among her lovely gifts and remembrances.

Among those gathering to help her celebrate were her three daughters, Mrs. Myrtle Potts and Mrs. Swanberger of this city and Mrs. Ethel Hovick of La Jolla, son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Wade; Mrs. Mayme Wade, a daughter-in-law; Mrs. Swanberger, son-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Potts, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rowell, J. R. Wade, W. F. Hovick, Betty, Joan and Jane Wade, Walter Swanberger, Jr., all grandchildren; Peggy Holloway, a great granddaughter; and Mrs. Ella McCune, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Ferguson, friends.

BREAKFAST ENJOYED IN PASADENA

Mrs. Will Flood of Pasadena entertained a group of her Santa Ana friends yesterday at a bridge breakfast in her home on Anadale Road.

Centering her dining room table with a low bowl of Hadley roses, the hostess chose her appointments in keeping with the colors of the flowers and marked places for sixteen. Bridge followed in the afternoon.

RIDERS PLAN MAY STEAK BAKE

Junior Ebell riding section will have a steak bake to which their husbands will be invited next Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Ray Tarr, where she had previously arranged a dainty tea course, and here made plans for the outdoor event which will occur May 21.

Those attending included Mrs. Stauffer, Mrs. Tarr, Mrs. Chester Horton, Mrs. Herbert Stroschein, Mrs. E. F. Elstrom, Mrs. George Walker, Mrs. Edmund West, Mrs. Raymond Terry and Miss Mildred Spicer.

GENERAL AID MEETS WEDNESDAY

The General Aid of the First Presbyterian church, composed of all the sections, had an enjoyable session this week in the church annex.

Approximately 70 women attended the affair. Mrs. J. L. Marshall held devotionals in the form of a tribute to Christian heroism, and Miss Leilah Fernald gave an interesting talk based on her world tour last year.

MARY STODDARD Thoughtless Actions Can Often Cause Serious Marital Misunderstandings

Ninety per cent of us act upon the impulse of the moment at one time or another, and not even the most self-possessed individual is an exception. Because we do not think twice before we speak or act at all times we are apt to find ourselves bound in a network of circumstances which we are unable to escape. Such is the dilemma of a wife who writes today:

Dear Miss Stoddard: A problem has arisen on the horizon of our married life that, it seems, absolutely silly to me. I certainly will appreciate your help.

I have thoughts for only one man—he is my husband—he is my world, the incentive to live and take interest in this world, and yet he gets some of the wildest notions.

He is in the hospital with an ailment that does not keep him entirely confined inside, but is allowed to go out wherever he chooses.

I went down to the town where he is in the hospital so as to be near him for a while. I got so lonely at home without him. The house is a void when he is not there.

I got a room in a family house for two nights, just a few short blocks from the hospital.

I went to see him at the hospital. We went to a show and back to the hospital, and from there I went to my room. I was to be there and then leave on an early train for home.

I was worried about him, but he was so rested after having been able to get the things which enabled him to sleep which I was not allowed to give him at home, that he was so relaxed and I overslept and missed my train; also I did not go to the hospital at the appointed time to bid my husband good-by, so he came to me.

Now comes the misunderstanding. I knew positively that it was my husband who was walking on that porch, also that it was he who knocked on the door. The power of my intuition sensed the characteristic step and knock of my husband, whom I love and trust and think about every waking moment.

He says before opening the door I should have asked who it was, then unlocked and opened the door, and he says I broke his heart, and he was brooding about it.

He seems to think that because I opened the door without asking who it was that I will open the door to anyone who happens to knock.

He says he has lost faith in me because of this incident.

There is no reason for him to worry about any such silly thing, because, as I said before, I care nothing about other men. I stay at home, absolutely alone except for my cat, and do not fear, as I have never given anyone any reason to come bothering around. I have no reason to be afraid, as I behave myself, so if I am molested I would be someone so depraved that he would attack anyone he felt to be without defense. Please help me.

Sincerely,
A SUBSCRIBER.

First of all, you must make some allowance for your husband's illness. Were you ever confined in a hospital for several months? If so, you will understand that in the first place it is not a normal existence. The inactivity, together with ill health, gives one so much more time to think that they're apt to start thinking in circles.

Your husband is absolutely right about one thing. You should, under all and any circumstances, find out who is at the door before you open it when you are alone. It would be quite difficult for him or anyone else to believe that your intuition is so strong that you would know it was him beyond the shadow of a doubt.

You acted hastily, and he spoke hastily, but I am sure a little time

Bride - To - Be Honored at Shower

One of Santa Ana's brides-to-be whose nuptials will be events of the coming summer is Miss Ethel Gilbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gilbert of West Fifth street, soon to become the bride of Frank Johnson of this city.

Last night, the prospective bride was honored at a lovely shower given by her school friends, Miss MaryBelle Arnold, at her home at 405 South Birch street.

Arriving for a short call at the Arnold home, on invitation of Miss Arnold, Miss Gilbert found her mother and sister and aunt and her fiancé's mother awaiting her there, and later other friends joined them for an informal evening of bridge, making the party a complete surprise to the honored guest.

Mrs. Sara Johnson, mother of the bridegroom-to-be, won high score award in cards, with Miss Evelyn Ingers.

Lovely gifts of a miscellaneous nature were presented to the bride-elect by the assembled guests, and dainty refreshments were served at flower-decked tables at the close. Spring flowers filled the rooms where the following gathered for the courtesy:

Miss Gilbert and her mother, Mrs. William Gilbert, and sister, Miss Madeline Gilbert; Mrs. Johnson, Mesdames Maude Harbour, Mildred Ewert, Ada Miller, Maude Staton, Evelyn Ingers, Clara Staton and Gladys LePage and the latter's mother, Mrs. Miller; and the Mesdames Edna Ingham and Gladys Vest, and Mrs. Annie Arnold, who assisted.

TUX AND GOWN DANCE THIS SATURDAY

Tux and Gowners are anticipating their third annual spring formal this Saturday evening. Once again the Santa Ana Country club will serve as setting for the bevy of young matrons and misses and their broadcloth-coated escorts.

Spring decorations to offset the vivid and pastel summery frocks that will be worn, and Ray Ramon and his orchestra will provide music.

Herbert Hill, president of the governors' board, will act as head of the reception committee, and other board members will assist, since this is the first dance of their regime. Newly-elected in February, they include Mrs. Edward Hall, Mrs. Albert Harvey, Mrs. Oliver Lindemeyer, Mrs. Ernest Stump, Jr., Mrs. Stanley Anderson, Paul Beckman, Hume West, Wendell Finley, Dr. Stanley Norton, E. Lee Smith, and Herbert Hill.

THE DEAD WINNER

Marzinc, wily veteran of the track, managed to bring in his sulky first by a scant few feet at the Floresca track, Bucharest, one day in 1935. A cheer went up which was quickly stifled when the 70-year-old driver was seen to sway and fall to the track. Holders of tickets on Marzinc's horse demanded a payoff. It was refused on the grounds that Marzinc hadn't been weighed in after the race. A gruesome compromise was affected. The dead driver's body was carried to the scales and weighed in. Everything being in order, bets were paid off.

INDIAN EXTERMINATOR... Made commander of the English forces in America in 1758, Jeffery Amherst proved himself to be an able soldier in the war against the French and Indians. During the campaign Amherst became so incensed at the savagery of his Indian enemies who were in alliance with the French, that he actually attempted to put into effect a plan wherein smallpox was to be spread among the Indians by means of blankets contaminated with the disease. Whether or not the vile scheme was actually put into effect seems to be unknown.

Let's Have Some Teamwork

IT WOULD be a good thing for the county as a whole and the supervisors as individuals if they would forget the petty fuss which has been made over what brand of typewriters to use in the courthouse and would concentrate on what to do about the flood and water conservation bond issue, the proposed junior college and several other important matters which probably will demand all of the brains and horsepower that our officials can muster.

Little or no real benefit will accrue to the harassed taxpayer if the supervisors spend from now till Christmas arguing over the respective merits of typewriters. Who cares, anyhow?

But a lot of permanent and profitable value may result if the board focuses its attention on the vital water question and on other cases about which something should be done, such as, the needy and underfed children in county schools.

No supervisor will ever get rich, of course, on the munificent sum of $212.50 a month. But $212.50 a month multiplied by 5 is $1062.50, and that amount will buy a lot of beefsteak and spinach on the present market.

It all comes out of the public till, and we are of the good old-fashioned belief that the public is entitled to more than a fight for its money.

In fact, we imagine that there are a lot of people who would join us in saying that supervisors would be worth a lot more to the county if they cut out this bickering among themselves and with other county officials and instead showed a little teamwork and unity in the handling of general business.

A horse that works itself into a lather driving around the block isn't the kind you would bet on in a 25-mile race.

The supervisors should not waste their brains and courage in a row over a $60 typewriter; they should save it all for tackling that $13,000,000 water program ahead.

Insurance For The Taxpayers

IF ANY public body increases its expenditures for next year more than 2 per cent, there's a bad break somewhere along the line for John Taxpayer, according to the Tax Digest, the monthly bulletin of the California Taxpayers association.

As a basis for the contention, The Digest says: "Throughout the state of California, local government is organized and equipped to give practically all the services required by the citizens. Educational facilities are ample; the general government offices, including the courts, are fully manned; the highway system is in large part constructed; the cities have sewage systems, including disposal facilities; parks, recreational facilities, and libraries are in large part fully expanded. The era of expansion of services is now over and it remains only to augment them with the increase of population. In most cases governmental salaries are sufficiently above those in private employment to be adequate.

In short, our political subdivisions have matured to the point where taxpayers need not continue pouring ever-increasing amounts into the public treasury. It is very unlikely that population will increase more than 2 per cent a year during the next five years. Expenditures should be held to a rate increase more consistent with the steady growth of the state.

More than words will be needed, however, to block the rush of some governmental groups now that the state court has voiced the 5 per cent expenditure limit act, under which budgets could not be boosted more than 5 per cent in any one year.

One way to stop the rush is to enact Senator McBride's new 5 per cent act, drawn in such a way as to include the beneficial provisions of the old edict and at the same time pass the all-seeing eye of the state court.

A Valuable Project Closes

THERE'S a sad day in store for federal forum followers on May 3. That date will mark the last of the forum programs which have won so many friends in recent months in Orange county.

Some of the nation's best speakers and wisest teachers have been brought to local lecture halls through the forum. And who can deny that these men have broadened the vision and enlarged the knowledge of all who heard them?

As the forum closes, it is fitting that those who have enjoyed the programs should voice appreciation to Director Homer Chaney, to Sponsor Frank Henderson, to the citizen committees which chose the speakers, and to the national department of education for an outstanding all-around contribution to adult education.

Harry L. Hopkins wrote a book called "Spending to Save." Now how about one entitled "Drinking Yourself Sober"?

Will He Do It?

FOR THE third time, the assembly has adopted a Mooney pardon resolution, this time in the form of a petition to the governor that he act.

The assembly is elected on a basis of population, and comes nearer than any other body in the state to representing popular sentiment.

Here is Governor Merriam's chance to rid California of a nuisance and a scandal and to establish his own reputation nationally as a courageous and justice-loving executive.

Whimsies of O. O. McIntyre

Amelia Earhart seems to have acquired the perfect type of husband for a daring aviatrix, in George Palmer Putnam. He is a book publisher who, no matter his feelings, expresses a commendable calm over her hazardous exploits. He never opposes.

Every plan is presented to him before taking form, and he is always in hearty accord. He has perfect confidence in her ability at the controls and while not an active flyer has acquired much technical knowledge. Also he has made several long flights.

On her ocean hops he accompanies her to her plane and bids goodbye as casually as though she was just off for New Rochelle for the evening. Then he remains in seclusion, without a wink of sleep, until he receives word of her safe arrival.

Their marriage, despite the diversity of their callings, has been singularly ideal. They dine, lunch and attend the theater together frequently. I have been told that after her world flight, interrupted by a crackup, she may give up flying for all time because her husband has been such a good sport about it.

There were a shaky few days recently when it looked as though the historic New Amsterdam theater, long considered an ace playhouse, might go over to burlesque and the strip act along 42nd street Burlesque Belt. The papers were about to be signed when something happened which probably saved A. L. Erlanger and Flo Ziegfeld from turning over in their crypts. Those who knew the dash and Rialto flair of 42nd street 20 years ago would not know its down-at-heel and catch-penny drop today. A great street gone honky-tonk.

New York hotel owners, in letting down bars to smooch, do not they have suffered no damage losses whatever and have had but few minor complaints from guests. The patron with a dog, they say is invariably well behaved and realizing he is more or less under surveillance, is careful with his pet. Too, he is generally steady in his habits and not a carouser. A person coming to New York for a fling does not bring a dog. And it is the visiting party flinger who often not only disrupts hotel service but disturbs guests and causes property loss.

Enlightened 1937: It was interesting to watch pedestrians on the avenue near Scribner's react to a window washer's ladder leaning from the middle of the sidewalk during the rush hour the other noon. In 15 minutes time not more than five passed under the ladder. All, gravely fearing the ancient superstition, walked around. One man reading a newspaper was just under it when he noticed his predicament, gave a little squeak and indulged one of those stooping little Bobby Clark runs around it. I noticed Guernsey Curran gave it the go by as did Vinton Freedlay and Percy McCord.

I know a pulp magazine writer who for years has had but one pronounced superstition and that is having his path crossed by a black cat. He never had the experience until recently when it happened late one night by the light of the moon. He went to bed restless. In an hour his phone rang, it was an unexpected good news from a London publisher. At daylight he was aroused by a night letter that a play he had almost forgotten had been accepted by a prominent producer. And when he left his apartment around noon there was the black cat sitting on an entrance step. Coaxed into the house, it has been a household pet for eight months.

Olin Miller in a syndicate paragraph observes: "What puzzles a lot of us about the average New York column is how its conductor can keep from thinking long enough to write it."

Thingumbobs Arams n' Ardy keep friendly by seeing each other only on broadcasting matters. . . . Frank Craven will not appear in or direct a stage or screen play that contains a suggestive line. . . . Gouverneur Morris often re-writes a short story a dozen times. . . . Darryl Zanuck smokes 30 cigars a day. . . . Premier Baldwin can put himself to sleep with a few cups of hot coffee.

I am a shameless tip peeper. When a diner near me leaves a pourbois I strain and squirm until I can see how much. Last night I was sneaking a peek and looked right smack up into the waiter's face. He smiled and said "Ninety cents." And did I get sniggered at all the way home; all the way I did.

WASHINGTON.—Not much appears in the headlines about it, but the old art of lobbying is as strong as ever in capitol hill.

One of the most active is the sugar lobby. The big refiners have rented a ritzy house at 1917 23rd street, just around the corner from the residences of Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, ex-Senator Dave Reed and various embassies. Here dwell Ellsworth Bunker, lobbyist for the refiners, and Jack Dalton, once head of the AAA sugar section, but now doing valiant battle for the refiners.

The sugar refiners claim that they now have in their pocket more than 100 congressmen and a majority in the senate who will vote their way when it comes to dividing up sugar quotas in the new sugar bill.

Another energetic lobby is that of the big radio broadcasters who are worried sick over the tax proposed by Federal Communications Commissioner Payne on the kilowatt strength of their stations.

Most energetic radio lobbyist is Charles Sawyer, who represents WLW, Cincinnati, most powerful radio station in the country. His half million kilowatts would have to pay a tax of $1,500,000 annually. No wonder Sawyer is active.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES

One of the most outspoken senate supporters of the President's judiciary reform is Theodore F. Green, a close friend of Chief Justice Hughes.

They have been brought together through their mutual interest in Brown university, where both are members of the board of fellows.

When Ted Green was entering Brown as a 17-year-old freshman, Charley Hughes was working for his master's degree, aged 22.

In recent years Hughes returns to Brown for alumni reunions or for meetings of the board, he often visits his friend Green. And ever since Green has been in Washington—at 70 he is a freshman senator—he has often called at the home of friend Charley, aged 75.

Usually they find other things to talk about than the retirement of judges who have reached 70.

HOUSING SNAG

After four years of repeated promises by President Roosevelt, a low-cost housing bill in some form will probably be enacted this session. But if it does, no thanks will be due to Representative Henry Steagall.

The Alabamian is chairman of the house banking committee, which for some unexplained reason was given jurisdiction over housing legislation. Solely because of his strategic position, Steagall was made co-author of the Wagner bill, thus taking recognition away from a younger colleague who really merited it—Representative Henry Ellenbogen of Pittsburgh.

Ellenbogen offered a housing measure as early as 1935, and worked closely with Senator Bob Wagner in the drafting of his bill—which now bears Steagall's name.

Yet, despite the Democratic platform's specific pledge for a low-cost housing program, despite administration prodding and the fact that his name is on the legislation, Steagall has lifted not one finger to push it. He even refused to hold hearings.

When called by Ellenbogen about his hostile attitude, Steagall barked: "Hell, man, a bill like that would bankrupt the country. I'm dead against it."

Note: If Steagall persists in obstructing housing legislation there is a strong chance that his committee may brush him aside and proceed anyway. The committee did this several years ago on a banking bill which Steagall tried to kill.

THOUGHTFULNESS

Despite the budget, the supreme court and the high price of during next week, Mr. and Mrs. Shonberg will go to Balboa for a week or two. Then they will go north to their ranch in the Mendocino mountains to spend the summer.

The other day, Secretary Perkins happened to show him a copy of Lincoln's second inaugural address which had been set up in type by Frederic Goudy, foremost type designer in the United States. Goudy probably had done more for the development of type styles than any other man in recent history.

So Roosevelt took time off to write him a letter congratulating him on his work for the contributions he has made to the science of printing.

NEW TRIPLE A

Behind the scenes a rough outline of a new AAA bill is being whipped into shape for submission to congress. If the President's bill goes through.

Formulation of this program was the real purpose behind last week's conference of farm leaders in Washington. At a similar confab last winter the only important agricultural relief measure decided upon for this session was a crop insurance program.

Two reasons are behind this revived militancy. One is the recent reversals by the supreme court which, farm leaders feel, indicate that the court is in the throes of a profound upheaval and that on another test a new AAA would stand an excellent chance to get by.

Second is the strong undercover conviction of the farm leaders that the President is going to have his way on the court issue.

The new Triple A probably will provide for three-year crop control contracts instead of one year, with the money to pay the government benefit checks again raised by processing taxes. This time, however, the tax features will be in a separate bill instead of being part of the farm measure, as they were in the original AAA.

Secretary Henry Wallace is wholeheartedly behind this program. He considers the present soil conservation act ineffectual, wants a new crop control law plentifully equipped with teeth.

MATTEAVAN.—Harry Thaw left today to appear before Judge Keogh at New Rochelle in the fourth attempt to gain his freedom. Lawyers have prepared a new writ of habeas corpus, and Thaw expressed confidence that he will soon be released. A long delay is predicted, however, to give the state attorneys time to examine the voluminous record.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shonberg sold their nine-acre ranch on North Main street to John Funk of Long Beach, the consideration being $11,000. The purchasers will take possession of the latter part of next week. Mr. and Mrs. Shonberg will go to Balboa for a week or two. Then they will go north to their ranch in the Mendocino mountains to spend the summer.

Gov. Hiram Johnson is coming to Santa Ana and his arrival is anticipated with keen interest by Progressives. He will be here next Thursday evening, when he will address a meeting at the Grand opera house. Red fire and music by the brass band will be incidents of the evening, and it is expected the occasion will arouse an enthusiasm that has not heretofore been displayed in this city during the present campaign.

An automobile belonging to Dr. J. J. Jacobs was taken from the corner of Main and Ninth streets last night while the owner was attending the high school oratorical contest.

One Man's Opinion

By X REPORTER

A friend came to see me lately and brought along a pocket full of gold. Literally. Fresh, unmined gold, straight from the hills. Nuggets.

I thought I detected a slight glitter in his eye. Maybe not. Gold has been known to make eyes glitter, even gleam.

I'm afraid I was not sufficiently appreciative. He told me the county the nuggets came from. He even named the creek from which they had been panned. I've forgotten the name of the creek.

There was no gleam in my eye, no glitter. I was interested, surely. They were pretty things. Five smooth yellow pieces of heavy metal of irregular shape. Imbedded in their sides were bits of the white rock in which they had been born when the earth was steamy and hot like an English plum pudding.

The nuggets belong to a third person who had panned them out of a stream bottom at low water when mountain snow was storing up water for the spring rush to the sea.

One nugget was flat and thin, of irregular shape, and about the size of the first tiny pancake mother used to make when she tested the heat of her griddle on Readers are invited to contribute mailbag letters on topics of general interest. Rules: (1) Letters must not exceed about 200 words—longer ones will be edited; (2) writers must sign names and addresses—unsigned letters will be ignored; initials only or pen names will be used when requested; (3) confine each letter to ONE idea; if you have two ideas, write two letters; (4) letters must wait turn for publication; (5) discussion of matters in the news, and therefore known to all readers, are preferred. Please cooperate by observing these rules. Thanks.—Editor.

WARNERS 'EDUCATORS'

To the Editor: The educational heresies being uttered by "leading educators" threaten once again to upset the fundamentals of teaching. A speaker before the Progressive Education association is quoted in the papers as saying: "The 3 R's are as outdated as the little red schoolhouse of the horse and buggy days. New subjects are needed."

Such dicta, uttered with the air of an oracle, are likely to throw the schools back into the chaotic and futile system from which only recently they have promised to emerge. The sponsors of this new movement to meddle with the basis on which all education must rest should reconsider for a moment the implication of their conclusion. If new subjects are needed in our curriculum, let them explain how these subjects are to be taught to pupils who cannot read. Is all instruction hereafter to be oral, and is the wealth of knowledge that is contained in the literature of the past to be a closed book to the children of today? For that is exactly what these latterday inspired prophets imply, when they tell us that reading is outdated.

Every once in a while our "leading educators" go crazy on some subject, and the defenseless children suffer the consequences. It is not so long ago that they sponsored the system of vertical writing, and having ruined the handwriting of one generation, consigned the matter to oblivion. More recently they went crazy on the subject of classifying children on the basis of their IQ's, and now they tell us this likewise was all wrong. Are we again to have a generation of children subjected to an experiment that will destroy their power to cope with the demands of a prosaic world?

These advocates of the abandonment of the 3 R's have either said more than they mean or they stuff themselves by excluding from the curriculum those essentials upon whose foundation rests the possibility of acquiring the newer subjects that are now being advocated. The experiment has really already been tried, and the evidence of its folly is the fact that some university graduates cannot write a presentable letter. Our public schools should cease to be a field of experimentation and the children the contain should be protected from these irresponsible enthusiasts who try and abandon their theories with a complete failure to realize their baneful and irreparable consequences.

Skinny Skribbles

Around and About Town

This is public schools week, and Governor Merriam has thrown in a health day, and try and avoid automobiles week, and a lot of other special designations to divert the normal flow to occasions which someone thinks should receive consideration. I am already convinced that the avoid automobiles week was timely, as I came near being run down at a business intersection this morning. Not to minimize other events, may I suggest that the public schools week is important, and that the little kiddies would like to be able to tell their playmates that their mamas and daddies visited the schools this morning. Whenever I want to find out if it is going to rain I always inquire of the fellow who has lived here a few years. He can tell you. If you ask the old timer he will tell you he don't know.

Charles Lambert of Tustin and George Peters of Santa Ana devote a few minutes to reminiscence. They have been here so long that the country and the towns look different than when they were hauling brick and sand for the construction of the old Commercial National bank, which was 50 years ago. They were young men then, worked hard, enjoyed life, fraternized with their fellow men, pushed aside some of the mud and mire of the preboreal rainy day, and whether the precipitation is normal or a flood descends, they are reasonably safe and ready for the changing climatic vicissitudes. But it is a source of comfort to meet occasionally a fellow who has lived here from now to then and back again from then to now.

Maybe those midwest and southern states cannot see some of their population for dust, but they become quite visible in California when they get their names on relief rolls.

Wallace Craney has come to Santa Ana to roar with Gilmore. He is the branch manager. I'll help him roar if he keeps the lion away. I went into a cat one day to get lunch and the man in charge of the lion brought the genus Felis in with him. I was afraid he only had temporary charge and anyway I wasn't hungry when the lion came in, so I went out and left the lion in. I thought the lamb was safer if the lion had no competition. And another thing. So far as I am concerned I am convinced the time hasn't arrived for the lion and the lamb to lie down together.

Glenn Martin is to fly the same course May 10 that he did 25 years ago, making the trip from Newport Beach to Catalina and return. Glenn started to fly physically some 51 years ago at Macksburg, Iowa, a small inland country town. He flapped his propellers to the wind Jan. 17, 1886, and has been flapping in contraptions to aerodynamics which has its outstanding expression in laboratories at Baltimore, where the Glenn L. Martin Co. plants are now located.

The old Josh Billings philosophy: "He that kant laff iz tew be pityed, and him that wont laff iz tew be feared," always aroused the opinion that that sort of an individual was one of those fellows who was looking for a long rate of interest.

The General Motors "Parade of Progress" is to "parade" May 1, 2 and 3 at the Municipal bowl. Advance Manager Cowles tells me the exhibition will take you back to the days of the old gas street lamp when the night watchman went around and "lit" 'em, and another fellow turned 'em out in the morning. Say, that sort of a light was some flicker. And the old coal and wood cooking stoves will be exhibited, when it took strength and courage to stand over one of them and cook the meals. You old timers have seen your mother do so many times. The good old days were good old days, but I haven't any desire to return to the mechanical methods. For the neighborly spirit and homely fellowships there is some longing. Those days we had fewer friends because we had fewer neighbors and we could not get to them so often. Now you can have hundreds of friends hundreds of miles away and get to call on all of them in a few days. Time marches on. So does science.

Painters have a lot of trouble removing paint with a blow-torch, generally because the flame is directed only at one point for a long period of time, making the work slow and tedious. A nimble-witted inventor has just perfected a new flame-spreading device which fastens to the nozzle with a set-screw. This device flattens out the flame to four times its normal area. The device is also useful in other operations where a wide, flat flame is desirable.
